TAX DEADLINE SET AT MAY 2

OTTAWA (CP) — The deadline for filing 1976 personal income tax returns has been extended to Monday, May 2, the revenue department announced today.

The action is being taken because the usual April 30 filing deadline falls on Saturday this year.

Oil Price Spiral No End in Sight

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A private study done for 25 industry and government clients forecasts that world oil prices will rise just as rapidly in the next 10 to 15 years as they have in the 3½ years since the Arab oil embargo.

By next year oil will be about $1 a barrel more than this year, the study by Kansas City's Midwest Research Institute and California's Sherman H. Clark Associates predicts, and by 1990 will be almost $3 more than this year.

The study forecasts that by 1985 the price for foreign oil will be $26.14 a barrel, and for domestic oil $24 a barrel.

World demand for oil will begin to outstrip supply by 1985, the study said, which will force an even more dramatic price rise in the five years after 1985. The study forecasts a price for foreign oil of $37.42 a barrel by 1990, and a U.S. oil price of $37.50.

If the study is correct, and world and domestic oil prices reach that level by 1990, that would mean a gasoline pump price of almost $2.50 a gallon.

The study said there are three reasons why U.S. oil will rise so rapidly in price, eventually surpassing the price of foreign oil. U.S. oil prices start from a lower base; the so-called "old" oil that is price-regulated will soon be exhausted, and domestic stocks will dwindle more quickly than stocks in foreign countries like Saudi Arabia.

The study assumes that Saudi Arabia (the country with the world's largest oil reserves) will not expand production as rapidly as some experts forecast, putting upward pressure on prices.

"We restrain Saudi production, because we think the Saudis will restrain it," Sherman H. Clark said the other day in an interview. "We do not think the Saudis will expand their oil output just to match the world appetite. We think they will conserve their oil."

The study also assumes that the world's rush to nuclear power will slow down dramatically as more and more environmentalists question its worth. The study assumes nuclear delays in half the countries of the world now building nuclear plants, meaning more reliance on oil.

Meanwhile, a United Nations report says the world probably has enough oil and gas to last at least 100 years, but much of it will be expensive to tap.

The UN report said: "Additional petroleum and gas resources would most probably be available, albeit at a substantially higher cost during the period of transition to the use of renewable energy sources, even if this transition period should last a hundred years or more."

The UN document is a summary of a report based on a conference held last July in Laxenburg, Austria. About 70 geologists, engineers, economists and systems analysts attended the conference, sponsored by the UN Institute for Training and Research and the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis.

Canadian Oil Pipe Disturbs Americans

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) —

Several United States governors expressed misgivings Sunday about having their energy fate in the hands of Canada, through which Alaskan crude oil would flow to landlocked refineries.

The governors and representatives of 13 northern and midwest states met behind closed doors in Olympia all day to discuss the question of oil trans-shipment from Alaska. The oil is to start flowing in the Trans-Alaska pipeline to Valdez in June.

The governors at the meeting were Dixy Lee Ray of Washington; Jay Hammond of Alaska; John Evans of Idaho; Thomas Judge of Montana; Arthur Link of North Dakota; Scott Matheson of Utah; and Ed Herschler of Wyoming.

Representatives attended from the states of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Oregon and South Dakota.

The refineries in those states are seeing their supplies from Canada being cut off and are looking to Washington State as a possible funnel through which Alaska oil could flow.

Ray reportedly pressed hard for a proposal under which Alaskan crude would be shipped into Washington by tanker and then shipped to the midwest through existing Canadian pipelines.

"We've been shafted by Canada so often now, why should we think they won't do the same thing again?" said Montana's Judge. His sentiments were echoed by Wyoming's Herschler.

Judge referred to Canada's elimination of oil shipments to the United States. By 1982 Canadian crude oil shipments to the United States are scheduled to halt.

Judge, Herschler and other governors indicated support for a system under which Alaskan crude would be shipped east through an American pipeline as proposed by the Northern Tier Pipeline Co. of Montana, which has applied for a permit to run a line east from the state of Washington.

"One of the advantages of the Northern Tier plan is that it will be controlled by American industry and American interests," said Idaho's Evans.

Philadelphia coach Fred Shero defended his switch in goaltending, but that didn't detract from the fact that Bernie Parent emerged as the "goat" in Flyers' 4-3 overtime loss to Boston Bruins in the opening game of their National Hockey League semi-final series.

Flyers trailed 3-0 after two periods when Shero made the switch. Philadelphia tied it before the end of regulation time, 3-3, but Parent inadvertently knocked in the winner in overtime.

Montreal Canadiens also came away 4-3 winners in their opening game, but the defending champs had to score twice in the third period to defeat New York Islanders. Page 16.

Spewing Oil Plug Readied

Times News Services

STAVANGER, Norway — All emergency operations at Bravo platform, site of Europe's worst oil spill disaster, were called off today because of rough seas in the Norwegian Ekofisk Field in the North Sea.

A barge, the Chocoway, with heavy equipment had anchored near the runaway rig in hopes that it could begin preliminary work toward capping the rig spewing 4,000 tons of oil and mud unchecked into the North Sea for the third day. But wind-whipped seas interfered with the plans.

"The Chocoway barge was towed off location at 2 p.m. due to rising weather with winds running at about 32 knots," said Ken Laird, industrial relations supervisor for the American Phillips Petroleum Company, operators of the field.

The wind is expected to drop to about 15 knots and be variable by Tuesday morning. At that time the barge will be moved back into position to resume preparatory work for capping the well," Laird said.

An international fleet of pollution control vessels had converged today on the runaway oil rig amid hopes that the full-scale capping operation could get under way Tuesday.

Boots Hansen and Richard Hattenberg, two of oil well fire-fighter Red Adair's men, were put aboard the oil-covered drilling rig atop the well Sunday.

They said that the leak was on the rig itself and that the underwater portion of the well was undamaged. It was hoped that the flow could be stopped with a device called a Christmas tree, a multi-valve cap that is put atop new wells to stop the oil flow until production plans are decided.

After blowing eight to 10 knots from the north and north-east during the weekend, the wind shifted this morning and dropped to a light two-knot breeze from the south.

But "the wind will increase gradually and by midnight it is expected to reach more than 10 knots," the Norwegian Meteorological Institute said. "Tuesday and Wednesday we expect it to increase to light gale force from the south and southwest."

"This will not have much influence on the drifting of the main oil slick, but it may make working conditions aboard the rig more difficult for the experts."

The blowout has created a 12-mile oil slick drifting back and forth in the area. The slick was estimated at two to five miles wide.

NEWS BRIEFS

Clark Laughed

OTTAWA (CP) — Jack Horner says Joe Clark might have persuaded him to remain in the Tory party, rather than switching to the Liberals, but instead Clark laughed when told Horner might leave. See story on page 36.

Schreyer to Stay

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer said on the weekend he would be sticking with the New Democratic Party if it is returned to power in the provincial election and that he had no intention of accepting a federal Liberal cabinet post. See story on page 11.

New Zealand Jolted

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (UPI) — An earthquake measuring 5.25 on the Richter scale jolted parts of New Zealand Sunday. There were no reports of injuries or damage.

Polish Hijack Fails

NUERNBERG, West Germany (UPI) — A Polish soldier carrying a submachine gun seized a hostage and tried to hijack a Polish airliner Sunday at the airport in Cracow, Poland, but was subdued by authorities, West German tourists reported today.

Bankers Arrested

LUGANO, Switzerland (AP) — Three senior officials at the Credit Suisse branch at Chisasso were arrested today in what may be Switzerland's largest bank fraud scandal, the state prosecutor's office said. Credit Suisse is one of the three largest banks in Switzerland.

By The Canadian Press
Canadian sports writers who covered Team Canada's humiliating 11-1 loss to the Soviet Union in the world hockey championship in Vienna Sunday are almost unanimous in criticizing the actions of some Canadian players.

"It was the way they lost that Canadians should be ashamed of," wrote Jean Acolin in Montreal Martin. "Wilf Palement and Walt McKechnie acted like savages and they have begun to specialize in tarnishing the image of Canadian hockey abroad."

"Canadian professional hockey was utterly humiliated," said Southam columnist Jim Coleman. "The manner in which some of our professionals acted last night will be a lasting embarrassment to North America which long has prided itself on being the best in the world."

Palement, the Colorado Rockies forward who took 11 minutes in penalties, was singled out for particular criticism.

Donald Ramsay in the Toronto Globe and Mail quoted Palement as saying: "I had nothing to lose. The game was over. I figured I could hurt somebody, make them think twice in the next game. I always like to win."

With the Russians leading 10-1, Palement slashed Sergei Babinov and took a five-minute penalty.

Coleman and others singled out Palement, McKechnie, Greg Smith and captain Phil Esposito as Canadian players who declined to remove their helmets while the Soviet national anthem was being played.

"McKechnie not only forgot to remove his headpiece but slouched disdainfully, his chin resting on both gloved hands atop his hockey stick," Bertrand Raymond of Le Journal de Montreal wrote that if the team was at full strength, coach Johnny Wilson and general manager Derek Holmes could have benched Palement "but they seem to need him."

"Palement tried to injure his opponents again... His disgraceful attitude has begun to seriously embarrass team officials."

BANDIT GETS $1,200

A stocky, quiet-spoken man with a revolver tucked in his belt Sunday night escaped with $1,200 from the White Spot Restaurant at Douglas and Caledonia.

Assistant manager Cheryl Gibb said today the robber was "just lucky" to get that much money. She wouldn't elaborate.

The man entered the restaurant at 8:10 and quietly told 19-year-old cashier Della Pollard he wanted all the money.

The cashier said the handle of a gun protruded from his belt.

She handed over the money and the robber ran across The Bay parking lot.

He is described as being five-foot, 10 inches tall, in his early 20s, with a dark complexion, dark brown bushy hair and a heavy build. He was wearing blue jeans and a white shirt.

It was Greater Victoria's 43rd armed or attempted armed robbery since Jan. 1.

In Colwood over the weekend, three break-ins netted thieves a $2,300 high performance car engine, a stereo set and $1,000 worth of sporting goods equipment.

The engine was stolen from the showroom of Millstream Chevrolet only hours after the new dealer's official opening. The stereo was taken from the Juan de Fuca senior citizens' recreation centre. The other break-in occurred at Ray's Sports Centre on Sooke Road.

$107,000 Stamp Theft

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than $107,000 worth of stamps belonging to five Americans were stolen on the weekend from a suite at a city hotel.

The stamps, part of a stamp exhibition held here last week, were stolen from Edward Allen Richardson of League City, Texas, who told police the theft occurred sometime between 7 p.m. and 10:30 p.m.

Police said today they suspect the thief has a good knowledge of stamps because only the most valuable were taken.

Ferry Directors Undecided On Reductions, Routes

Directors of the B.C. Ferries Corporation will attend Tuesday's board of directors' meeting with a wait-and-see attitude about fare reductions.

Nanaimo director Graeme Roberts, who wants an across-the-board 25 per cent cut, said today there has been enough public reaction to the high fares and he thinks "other directors will know the feelings of the people and favor the reduction."

But, he said, the issue has never come up at previous board meetings so it is hard to predict.

The cabinet will recommend to the board the corporation use part of the recently-acquired $8 million federal subsidy to bring about "appropriate rate reductions," but it is up to the directors to decide the amount and the routes on which they should apply.

The board meeting starts Tuesday at 9 a.m. in the Legislative Buildings.

Victoria director Allen Clarke said today he is "naturally in support of anything that will please the customer," but wants to look at facts and figures before making up his mind.

He said the board is charged under the B.C. Ferries Corporation Act to be fiscally responsible but that rate reductions may fit into that description.

"If we can possibly do it we will," he said.

Director John Ferguson of Vancouver said he has an open mind toward fare reductions, but that the rate structure is not his top priority.

"I'm much more concerned about the possibility of a complete disruption of the service in June (because of the expiration of union contracts) than I am about the fares," Ferguson said.

"If everybody is all worried about the fares and how they disrupt the tourist business, what do they think a strike would do?"

Ferguson said it is important that directors know the truth about how the negotiations are going and the estimated amount of salary increase before the directors can decide where the federal subsidy should be used.

Director Almer Michaud of West Vancouver said he wouldn't decide on a fare change before he knows the figures involved.

"Until we know what's wanted or expected on the up-coast runs it's pretty difficult to predict what will be left," he said.

Oil Spills 'Short-Lived'

SEATTLE (AP) — An oil company researcher says the toxic effects of a crude oil spill are relatively short-lived and do not appear to affect marine life as adversely as many people think.

"Within 12 hours, the light toxics are all gone," Dr. Frederick T. Weiss, a Shell Oil Co. senior research chemist, said Saturday. "Some evaporate directly into the air and others are soluble in water and evaporate later."

"The life of the spilled oil is not all that long,"

Washington Governor Dixie Lee Ray has been criticized by environmentalists for saying essentially the same thing. She says that since crude oil is a natural substance, it has no proven long-term ill effects. Birds are its main victims, she says.

Weiss cited several recent studies including one by the national academy of sciences, indicating the effects of even a major spill largely disappear within a year, he said.

Photochemical oxidation and biological degradation continue the process, he said, and "within a period of one to five years, very little results are left."

Shellfish seem capable of either metabolizing or throwing off hydrocarbons so they do not run through industrial areas as they do on the east coast," Duxbury said.

He said his major concern was not how long it would take to "heal" the water after a large oil spill, but how much "chronic low level spills" would change an area's productivity.

Timing, he said, is a key factor in how damaging a single spill might be to marine life.

Dr. Alvin C. Duxbury, research oceanography professor at the University of Washington, questioned whether that figure would pertain to the Puget Sound area, however.

"That wouldn't be true here since most of our rivers don't run through industrial areas as they do on the east coast," Duxbury said.

He said his major concern was not how long it would take to "heal" the water after a large oil spill, but how much "chronic low level spills" would change an area's productivity.

Timing, he said, is a key factor in how damaging a single spill might be to marine life.

Trudeau To Visit France

PARIS (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau is to make an official visit to France May 12. The Canadian Press has learned from reliable sources.

The visit is scheduled to come shortly after a three-day visit by Claude Morin, Quebec's intergovernmental affairs minister, which begins Wednesday.

Marc Lalonde, Canada's health and welfare minister, is to visit France today and Tuesday.

Observers here said the visits by Trudeau and Lalonde are an indication that France wants to maintain solid relations with Canada.

Pakistan Jailings Fail To Stifle Opposition

ISLAMABAD (AP) — Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto's police rounded up more leaders of the campaign demanding his resignation, but the opposition defied him by calling for a protest march on the National Assembly.

Bhutto jailed 48 more persons Sunday in his counter-offensive against a campaign to oust him. Most top leaders of the opposition Pakistan National Alliance (PNA) were already in jail, and the round-up brought in the acting PNA head, Nawabzada Nasrullah Khan, and second-echelon leaders in major cities.

The PNA at once announced a new acting head, Pir Pagaro, and called for a march to the National Assembly in Islamabad next Saturday to press its demands for Bhutto's resignation and new elections.

The new assembly meets for the first time on Tuesday, but the PNA refuses to take its seats. It says that Bhutto and his Pakistan People's party rigged the March 7 election in which the government party won 164 of the 200 elected seats.

Since then there have been almost daily demonstrations against Bhutto, and almost 200 persons have been killed by security forces or in clashes between the prime minister's foes and his supporters.

The country's three largest cities, Karachi, Lahore and Hyderabad, are under martial law and a round-the-clock curfew, and the cities of Sialkot, Lyallpur and Bahawalnagar are under curfew.

The PNA held a protest march in the twin cities of Islamabad and Rawalpindi Sunday, but no major violence was reported anywhere in the country. Maulana Fateh Mohammed, one of the alliance leaders still out of jail, told a crowd of 5,000 they must carry on the anti-Bhutto campaign.

Auction Sets Record

VANCOUVER (CP) — The latest auction of British Columbia oil and gas rights raised a record of $20,045,899 as bids on 132 parcels were accepted.

Bonus component in the total was $19,845,185, nearly double the previous record high for an auction established in 1969.

AEC to Trace Uranium Waste

OTTAWA (CP) — The Atomic Energy Control Board announced today details of a $5.7 million investigation and decontamination program for communities afflicted with radioactive waste from nuclear installations and uranium mines.

The program will be conducted this year and 1978 under the auspices of a federal-provincial study group on radioactivity and will be financed through cost sharing agreements with the federal government, the provinces and industry, the board said in a statement.

About $1 million has been earmarked for investigation and remedial work at Elliot Lake, Ont., where a house-to-house survey last year revealed widespread contamination.

Of 1,600 houses surveyed, 587 had varying degrees of contamination, the control board said. Among the contaminated properties, 170 were located on a natural mineralized zone containing radioactive minerals.

In Port Hope, Ont., about 150 sites will be the subject of about $3 million in expenditures.

About 9,000 tons of radioactive waste were removed from the community last year and an additional 75,000 tons are to be removed this year.

Among 3,170 properties examined earlier in the town, about 550 required decontamination and another 500 needed further investigation, the board said.

In Uranium City, in the far north of Saskatchewan, a $1 million program will be used for work on 30 major sites.

THE OUTCASTS

Zaire Pushes Rebels Back

KOLWEZI, Zaire (UPI) — In a surprise pre-dawn raid, Zaire troops today recaptured the former army headquarters town of Mutshatsha virtually without resistance, a military spokesman said.

It was the first major military victory for government forces since an estimated 2,000 Katangese rebels swept across the border from Angola eight weeks ago and captured a huge slice of mineral-rich Shaba province.

Military observers said the tide now seemed to be rolling inexorably in favor of the joint Moroccan-Zairean forces who were also reported poised to storm Kapanga, another important town held by the rebels.

Eight American Methodist missionaries have been held under house arrest in Kapanga since the town fell shortly after the invasion.

Moving through 10-foot-tall elephant grass and thick forest, Zaire troops covered nearly 19 miles during the night from their forward positions near the Lubudi River and stormed Mutshatsha at 4 a.m., the spokesman said.

"There was some opposition, but it was too easy," the spokesman said at this mining capital near the front.

Most of the rebels fled without a fight, he said. Among those who did stay, several were captured, he said.

Government casualties were reported to be light.

A brigade of Zairean troops several hundred strong quickly occupied Mutshatsha, a town of 7,000 people, which had been the forward military headquarters until it fell a month ago.

The Zairean forces, with Moroccan troops in support in the area, quickly fanned out past Mutshatsha and pushed westward along dirt tracks toward the next important town, Kasaji, and the Angolan border.

A dozen commonwealth missionaries from Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand were trapped inside Kasaji when it fell to the rebels in bitter fighting five weeks ago.

They were reported safe though unable to communicate directly with the outside world.

Hearing Tonight

Saanich council will hold a public hearing tonight on an 80-acre housing development in the North Quad area.

Now zoned rural, council will consider rezoning it for single-family homes. Over-all plans for the area include a mix of single-family homes and townhouses.

Municipal planner Gil Laurensen said today any townhouse development will require individual rezoning.

the weather

Fine, warm weather will prevail over the B.C. Interior today as the ridge of high pressure moves gradually eastward onto the prairies. However increasing cloudiness is occurring on the coast as a disturbance lying offshore pushes gradually northeast onto the mainland. A few showers will accompany this disturbance over coastal regions later today and tonight as it moves onto the coast. Over the Interior some cloudiness and a few afternoon showers or thundershowers will occur on Tuesday.

★ Box-Office Bonanza At Bazaar

Pearson College's first international bazaar was a smash box-office success.

More than 4,000 turned up Saturday for concerts, dances, food, souvenirs and exhibits. Officials had expected between 2,000 and 3,000.

A highlight was the opening of the college's new 311-seat, $700,000 theatre, Max Bell Hall. Before his death in 1972, Bell was chairman of FP Publications, parent company of Victoria Press Ltd.

Five concerts of music, dance and drama were presented Saturday at the theatre, built on a hill overlooking the campus and containing a large stage, change rooms, a prop room and scenery shop.

Original plans called for 12 free bus trips to the college but 42 full busloads showed up, according to Dr. Richard Liu, one of the event's organizers.

LONG LINEUPS were common at Saturday's International Bazaar at Pearson College as overflow crowds like this one lined up for as much as an hour

which was officially opened Saturday. Facility will house all facets of theatre and musical arts.

The People Are Hurting . . .

Trying to pin down Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm's explanations of his $100 million surplus is like trying to catch the man who operates a shell game on city street corners. The minister attributes part of the surplus to a mild winter which encouraged more employment, resulting in lower welfare expenditures, and vaguely refers to a general move away from welfare in British Columbia. Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy used similar generalized rationalizations, citing the U.S. bicentennial, an expensive Canadian dollar, and inclement weather, as the reasons for last year's drop in tourism on Vancouver Island. This year's diminished ferry vehicle and passenger figures suggest McCarthy was talking through her hat, and while it is more difficult to nail Vander Zalm's baroque financial juggling, some truths are inescapable.

The budget for the department of human resources is down almost $26 million in the current fiscal year, from $595 million to $569 million. More than one-third of all the ministry's programs will get less money this year. A few examples suffice:

The contract treatment program providing services for children with behavioral and emotional problems drops from about $226,000 to $51,000. Special services to children which gives counselling to a child and his family in an attempt to keep the child out of an institution decreases from $5.3 million to $3.2 million. The Guaranteed Available Income for Need for senior citizens and handicapped people decreases from $126.8 million to $108.8 million. Income assistance or welfare drops from $218.8 million to $193.9 million, at a time of record unemployment.

Department of human resources officials countered the dollar decreases by saying current estimates actually represent a significant percentage increase over what was spent last year, as illustrated by the $100 million surplus. They also noted shifts in responsibilities and funding, plus the fact that some programs were not fully utilized last year so they received less money this year. While the latter point was true in some cases, it was not accurate in all programs. Again, the public gets mostly generalizations. Citing a $60 to $65 million saving on welfare and another $20 to $25 million under-run for senior citizen-handicapped aid, which accounted for the bulk of the $100 million saving last year, Vander Zalm admits to "a tightening up" and notes a change of attitude among the populace with respect to welfare. Once again generalizations are used to explain stark figures.

Yet consider the latest beneficence announced by the government for those qualifying under the GAIN program. An extra $13 million will be spent on GAIN recipients raising, among others, the basic monthly rate for single persons $15 per month so they will receive the princely sum of $165 per month, or $1,970 per annum, less than half the Senate poverty level recommendations for single persons of $3,981.

Then we read that the Greater Victoria Community Action Group, despite a favorable recommendation from regional officers of the ministry of human resources, has been cut off from all funds. The group, which has done recognized work with parolees, alcoholics and drug addicts, received $36,900 last year. This year it gets nothing because the minister refuses to fund what he describes as "advocacy" groups. Another vague generalization. Even the earlier announced handicapped increases don't take effect until July 1, representing a three month saving for the government on the current fiscal year.

What we have seen here over the past two years is a conscious cutback in people services cloaked in the minister's murky verbiage. No concrete reasons or statistics are used to back up cutbacks, and other groups are simply cut off because Vander Zalm doesn't like their attitude. This isn't compassionate government, it's a dictatorship of the minister's petulant whims. The way surpluses keep mounting up, the human resources ministry begins to look like a convenient trust fund for the government's general revenues. How Vander Zalm can get away with blanket statements about tremendous reductions of people coming into the income program when inflation remains high, or how he can budget less for welfare when unemployment is at record levels in this province remains suspect. How many people don't get welfare, how many people don't qualify for GAIN, and for what reasons? The very people who are cut off — the poor, handicapped and native Indians — do not have the education or health to advocate their claims. Those who do advocate are summarily cut off, or so it would appear.

The minister likes to chuckle and say he has the people behind him whenever criticism surfaces. It would seem that some of the "people" — the ones least able to help themselves — are not behind him, but under his heels.

. . . and Even Suffering

Provincial Conservative leader Dr. Scott Wallace has detailed a situation whereby the ministry of human resources' policies may cause some people considerable discomfort and pain. Quite properly the provincial government lifted laxatives from the pharmacare umbrella, but at the same time removed painkilling drugs such as aspirin. Wallace, who is a medical doctor, points out that elderly people suffering from rheumatoid arthritis may need to take 10 to 12 aspirins per day for pain. In turn, many of these same people must also take antacids to counteract the gastric effect of the aspirins. There is an alternative in Entrophen, a coated aspirin which costs four times the price of ordinary aspirins.

Since none of these items are now covered under pharmacare, arthritics will probably consult their physicians and ask for stronger painkilling drugs, which are covered under pharmacare. In effect, the government's policy could ultimately cost more in terms of doctor bills and higher priced drugs. Those elderly people who can't afford their own aspirin, or can't travel to a doctor's office, will simply suffer. If anything, this small sidelight shows the utter stupidity of such blanket policies.

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said, probably correctly, that he didn't think it was a big issue, adding that if people couldn't afford aspirin, they should get the money from the social assistance office. This is the same man who readily admits he is tightening up on social assistance. No one would wish that Vander Zalm suffered the pain of rheumatoid arthritis, but as long as one British Columbian agonizes with this disease and is not able to get medication, the minister stands condemned.

Sign Names

Recently some of the local papers have featured unsigned articles on their editorial pages.

A lawyer who wished to remain anonymous berated students who couldn't get jobs — a childish display of vitriol not worthy of the space given to it.

A doctor, also anonymously, wrote on the necessity of abortion, arguing that medical ethics could be abandoned in favor of the patient's feelings. Using the same argument one could also condone infanticide.

Let the papers give the same space to people who will sign their names and thereby lend more credibility to their statements.

Another example of giving only one side of a story is a recent Canadian Press article about Nova Scotia's recent power hike (termed laughable). It stated that they would now be charged $30 for 700 k.w.h. (or about 4.3 cents a k.w.h.). A call to the B.C. Hydro informed me that we are charged 4.6 cents for the first 550 k.w.h. with a reduced rate on further usage. It would seem that we are not much better off, if at all, than the power-poor maritimers. Now who's laughing?

The other side of a story may not always be pleasant, but the media has a responsibility to be objective, and let the chips fall where they may. — (Mrs.) Patricia Stanyer, Richmond.

Dividing Canada

There have been for several months now articles in the press in Victoria and other cities decrying the possibility of dividing Canada geographically. If one consults history we find that there is no need to do this, the answer appears quite simple.

If Quebec wishes to separate, then let her have only that amount of territory which she had on entering Confederation at that time. The rest of what is now Quebec was at that time known as Ungava. Let us now make this a new province by that name, Quebec reverting to her old area.

By consulting A Historical Atlas of Canada it will be found that it was not until 1898 that a Canadian act of that year made an addition to the size of Quebec, extending its boundary northward to the Eastmain River in James Bay only.

Let us as Canadians — the majority English speaking — tell the Quebecois that if they wish to remain in Canada, that they can do so as an equal partner, and will be welcomed by over 98 per cent of the English-speaking population, myself included. Failing this, then, as I say let them have a section of territory north of the St. Lawrence River, equivalent to what they had before of both the North and South Bank. All islands in the St. Lawrence to remain part of Canada.

It should be pointed out to the people of Quebec that they are getting by far the greatest amount of the equalization payments. It is time she became an equal partner and pulled her own weight.

Why should the rest of Canada have to pay an extra 10 cents per gallon on gasoline for the benefit of Quebec and the maritimes? The rest of Canada has never shared the huge revenues from the asbestos and other resources taken from Quebec.

Why is it when an English-speaking Canadian speaks out he is labelled a redneck and a bigot, where as a French-Canadian doing the same is a patriot? — Frank E. Marshall, 593 Ridley Drive.

Reverse Decision

As an employee of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, I would like to express my opposition to the recent statement and move to cut funding for the Community Action Group.

Our society's frequent contact with them indicates that the services they provide are unduplicated and essential. Should their funding be cut, the repercussions will be felt not only by government departments, but by many other social service groups, such as our own.

Community Actions Group's service record definitely indicates that they are non-political; they work against none, and maintain an ongoing working relationship with professionals, with the police, as well as the department of human resources. As advocates, the staff work within, not against, the system. They have served on committees that assist in making policy that are submitted to the government. The people at Community Action Group are in daily touch with the grassroots problems of a large segment of Victoria.

Mr. Vander Zalm, our representative, is over-riding recommendations by government staff as well as much of the populace. This recent power-playing move will add a mere pittance to his already $100 million pocket. The financial saving takes another regrettable toll in the lives of human beings.

I strongly urge a reversal in the decision. — T. Manthoyre, St. Vincent de Paul Society, 840 View Street.

Negative Publicity

Although I know that we cannot infringe upon the freedom of the press, I cannot help but despair when I see headlines such as the one on April 14 in the Times: Union Threatens Ferry Shutdown. After the experience of last summer, when we were severely hurt by a sharp decline in tourist traffic (something which is essential to the well-being of every resident of Greater Victoria and all of Vancouver Island) it is time to accutuate the positive.

Last year's headlines announcing sharp ferry rate increases and possible work stoppages were circulated far and wide all over this continent. It is time to look at the possibilities for settlement instead of strike. It is time to emphasize the continuance of efficient, regular and reasonably priced service instead of the possibility of disruption and dissention.

I believe much of the excellent work being done by Mrs. McCarthy in publicizing our province and its attractions is being undermined by unduly negative publicity from within our own boundaries, and by the offhand attitude of Transport Minister Jack Davis. — Fred Wieland, Sidney, B.C.

Editorial Error

I wish to point out an error in your editorial of April 16, entitled For Vigorous Crops. You stated that if the capital region had a sewage disposal scheme like Milwaukee's, then the region would not need outfalls, pumping stations or treatment plants. This is incorrect because the Milwaukee marketed by Milwaukee is processed sludge or solids that have been removed from sewage in a secondary treatment plant. The liquid effluent from the treatment plant would still require disposal via a pumping station and outfall. Pumping stations would still be necessary to get the raw sewage to the treatment plant.

The Milwaukee scheme is not a panacea for sewage disposal problems. It is merely a method of recovering a portion of the cost of secondary sewage treatment. — L.W. Pommen, P. Eng., 860 Brett Avenue.

Join U.S.

The devotion of French-speaking Canadians to their language bears imitation by speakers of English, and the possible separation of Quebec should force Canadians to think about their future as residents of North America.

There is a large but unorganized body of Canadian thought which recognizes that as citizens of the United States, Canadians would be free to speak English without embarrassment or guilt, and would gain some control over the forces which affect them despite the existence of that imaginary line which is the border between Canada and the U.S. It's time for us all to think very seriously about the kind of society we want. We ought to rationalize our de facto cultural union by uniting economically and politically.

The Expansionist Party of the United States is just now forming to promote consideration of such matters, and we invite membership from thoughtful Canadians. Please contact us at 449 West 46th Street, New York, N.Y. 10036. — L. Craig Schoonmaker, New York.

Campaign Promise

Education Minister Pat McGeer's dismissal of his bill to provide direct financial aid to independent schools as just one of many bills the government was elected to pass is incorrect. This bill breaks, as you have pointed out (Editor's Notebook, April 16), a 112-year tradition.

As you noted, the public school system established in the colonial period and confirmed during the first session of the legislative assembly in 1872 was non-sectarian and free. What you may not have realized is that the bill passed the house without opposition. The following year the assembly rejected without debate a petition from the Roman Catholic bishops which questioned this principle.

The assembly's decision was not made on the basis of religious, racial or social prejudice. The members who spoke on the bill supported the minorities' right to maintain their separate identity but contended that they must be prepared to do this without tax revenue contributed by all of the population. While the MLAs were undoubtedly influenced by the homogeneity of British Columbia's residents at the time, they were also convinced that a single school system would increase the unity of British Columbia and Canada.

If conditions and attitudes on this question have changed in the intervening years, Dr. McGeer should present evidence of this change. Hopefully, it would be more compelling than the evidence he used to justify the increases in car insurance rates. His refusal to offer such evidence is a direct insult to those who do not have an emotional dislike of independent schools but question the policy.

To cite one unanswered question, what percentage of the students attending independent schools are not Canadian by birth or citizenship? In my limited experience, fully 30 per cent are from other countries. While these students are welcome, I am not anxious to support them with my tax dollars at a time when public school budgets are being slashed. I am not opposed to independent schools which fill a need, as some do, but want more definite information of the disposition of my money before, not after, the fact.

Dr. McGeer, apparently, shares, with the rest of this ministry, the belief that he has been elected for four years to implement selected campaign promises, regardless of public opinion. May I suggest that he talk to some of the NDP ministers who preceded him in office about the results of such an attitude? — Ian D. Parker, 3146 Windsor Road.

B.C. Prices

I have recently returned from a four-month stay in California and Arizona, during which period I had many discussions with former U.S. visitors to Victoria. I feel qualified, therefore, to answer those critics of prices on B.C. ferries recently published in newspaper.

The absence of tourists on Vancouver Island is partly caused by the high cost of transportation to here. However, the following are, I feel, the main reasons, some comparison U.S. prices: 1. Average gasoline cost 54 cents U.S. gal.; 2. Restaurant meals, full course dinner $3.95 to $4.95 tops; 3. Groceries, milk 39 cents a quart, eggs and poultry products approximately one half of B.C. price; wine $1.95 U.S. gallon. Motels average $12. Car repairs (shop time) $8 per hour.

If you were a U.S. citizen would you come here for a holiday? I think not. — Do-ing Without in B.C.

Seat Belts

I have a message for all those self-righteous people who refuse to use their seat belts: I pray that I am never involved in an accident with you. The memory of your bashed and broken body will haunt me the rest of my life! — A User.

Horner the Voice of Beef?

OTTAWA — It is unfortunate that Frank Underhill, who loved to parody the classical depictions of party, did not live to witness the political reincarnation of Jack Horner.

The early writers were not, of course, united in their views. Traces of bitterness are discernible in some writings. It is a general condition of politics that the number of places of preferment always exceeds the number of applicants, which may account in part for the conviction of Alexander Pope that party is the madness of many for the gain of a few. Echoes of this sentiment may be heard today even in our own enlightened capital.

In general, however, loftier opinions have prevailed among scholars. They have tended to regard party as a union of hearts and minds for the furtherance of the public interest on the basis of agreed principles to which all subscribe.

Madness of Many

It is an obvious fact that in our own history, the parties have managed to combine principle with flexibility in a manner occasionally confusing to the public. But especially in the earlier chapters, allegiance to party was characterized by an almost religious fervor and leaders had so much to say about the principles to which they were irrevocably committed, and by which they were intermittently influenced that one wonders how they had time for anything else.

The times have changed, as dramatically illustrated by the metamorphosis of Horner. After nearly 20 years of exertions on behalf of the Conservative party (if not always of its leaders), he now finds himself the cabinet colleague and political soulmate of Otto Lang, Eugene Whelan and other illustrious members of the Liberal government.

Horner, by common consent, is an able parliamentarian, but ability would not in the past have been a ticket of admission opening the highest Liberal doors to an outspoken Tory. On what principle has he now made common cause with admiring teammates, who regarded him only recently with all the affection of a merchant for a bull in the china shop?

The only apparent principle is one ignored by the classical writers. Horner's great merit is geographical. Despite his new ministerial suit, he is indubitably an Alberta rancher, the pride of Pollockville and member for Crowfoot. In the eyes of the prime minister, he is no ordinary mortal but in himself a province. With the acquisition of Horner we are told the Liberals are a national party again. As a constitutionalist, Trudeau tends to think in terms of provinces, and it is well known that Albertans have tended for generations to look coldly on Liberals.

The search for explanations would be easier if Horner had been a peaceful moderate among his fellows, voting with the opposition but confining his interventions to thoughtful queries about school milk programs. But the new Liberal minister has been a Tory roughrider, holding very strong political opinions and tending occasionally to look with some doubt on the Conservative credentials of his less outspoken colleagues.

As Horner views the matter, transition does not involve conversion. He retains his conservative philosophy, pointedly remarking that the Liberals should be able to tolerate a Tory when the Conservatives accommodate a socialist — a disparaging reference to a Maritime MP, Dan MacDonald. He adds the reflection (possibly a late addition to his views) that politics is the art of compromise.

On the issue of national marketing boards, Horner practised the art by keeping haggard Liberals up until 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning at story committee meetings. Few of their comments about him in those days were suitable for direct quotation in the columns.

It is beyond question that Horner was interested in a large number of matters which were of equal concern to Eugene Whelan and Otto Lang. One always had the impression, however, that the trains were on collision courses. No doubt many of these puzzles will be cleared up once the minister, having mastered the new Liberal vocabulary, delivers a few speeches on interesting subjects such as the use-pay principle.

There appears to be some anticipation that the new minister will be able to rescue his party and constituents from the metric system (after their narrow escape from the original gun laws). On the other hand, certain rumblings from the Liberal caucus betray a lingering doubt that Horner is now a 100 per cent adherent of bilingualism, biculturalism and various other causes sacred to important segments of his new party.

The question may be asked: What would cause the Liberal party to reach out for the normally troublesome member for Crowfoot? There is certainly food for thought in the comments of various Liberals, notably Rod Blaker, a Quebec member who asserts without qualification: "We'll swallow up anybody we can get." This might explain the otherwise puzzling fact that the prime minister is reported to have been angling for Ed Schreyer, the New Democratic party premier of Manitoba, at about the time that the lines were out for the uncompromising Albertan free enterpriser.

Horizontal Society

But perhaps there is more to be learned from the recent reflections of Trudeau on the "horizontal society." What we appear to have, as the universe unfolds in a more and more satisfactory way, is a horizontal cabinet, free of the traditional and restrictive conventions.

Shared opinions have ceased to matter. The important point is that ministers should have strong, if unrelated opinions. Thus John Munro can woo the unions while Alastair Gillespie entrances business. Gene Whelan works for higher, Tony Abbott for lower prices. It is necessary, of course, for ministers to maintain diplomatic relations, sometimes cordial, sometimes reminiscent of the cold war. As and when Horner's status is clarified, he will doubtless emerge as the voice of beef in this cabinet of total involvement.

Separatism: It's Success Rate Has Not Been High

What makes states break up? Comparatively few of them do. War is the great catalyst. It was war which destroyed the Austrian, Russian and Turkish Empires of the early part of this century, and war which loosed the foundations of the British, Dutch, French and American empires in Asia in more recent times. In terms of international law, these empires were held to be sovereign states, as the Soviet Union still is, in spite of the extreme diversity of the peoples composing them, and the lack of political rights for clearly defined groups. They do not look much like states to us now; and we ought to choose examples that are smaller and more homogenous. With these as well, however, war can play a great part. It was war which divided Germany, Korea and China.

If we leave war out of consideration, and ask which states, in recent times, have split or nearly split because of internal influences, the list is a short one. The great example is Pakistan. Along with that goes the Federation of Malaysia as originally constituted, together with two bodies which never became sovereign states but were supposed to. The federations of the West Indies, and of Rhodesia-Nyasaland. These represent final and irrevocable splits, from which separate sovereign states emerged.

Among the countries which have nearly split in the past 30 years the most serious cases were the Congo, Nigeria, Cyprus and Lebanon, with others including Burma, In-

By J. D. B. MILLER

(Miller is a professor of international relations in Canberra, Australia. This article was excerpted by the Montreal Star from a speech at McGill University) donesia and the Sudan. In all these, something like an alternative government attempted to establish itself in a particular part or parts of the country, and had to be subdued by force. In some instances the use of force goes on. Perhaps one should include Northern Ireland here.

Plural Society

Every country on this list was formerly part of a European empire, and each is a plural society in which some parts refused to accept the rule of other parts or were in a state of constant conflict. That refusal was localized in a specific regional area in all instances except Cyprus and Lebanon, small countries in which the communities were mixed up with one another. In the others, it was a particular province — those with such names as Bangladesh, Katanga, Malawi, Zambia and Biafra — which attempted to become a sovereign state in its own right. Their success or failure depended, in most cases, on the effectiveness of the armed force exerted by the central government. Katanga and Biafra were subdued because that force was strong, while Bangladesh won its independence because that force was not. In all three instances there was interference from outside, which led to a full-scale war in the case of Bangladesh. The only instances in which federations came apart peacefully were those of Malaysia, Rhodesia and Nyasaland, and the West Indies. None of these federations had been a long-lived entity; in none had the main functions of government been centrally rooted.

What are we to deduce from this varied list of separatist tragedies and triumphs? We can say that in all cases the sense of communalism was strong, and that in some this was allied with a territorial base in a way which enabled Mazzinian nationalism to express itself. (Joseph Mazzini was the apostle of nineteenth century nationalism in Europe who emphasized the God-given character of nations: "True nations" were placed by God in particular areas bounded naturally by rivers and mountains, where the people spoke the same language, were endowed with the same tendencies, and were educated by the same historic tradition. To him, Italy was the most clearly-defined of nations.)

Where force was used, the rebel province striving to become a sovereign state was defeated in all instances except in the dismemberment of Pakistan, a state unlike any other we have known in the geographical separation of its parts. Even in this case, the decisive element was intervention from India, not the strength of resistance in the rebel province itself. Only the three cases exist of successful peaceful separation, and in these the central government was new and lacking in power. Singapore did not want to leave the former sovereign state, but was pushed out by Malaysia. In the other two, powerful established territorial governments simply would not stay in an association. Britain, the imperial power which retained legal control in both these cases, approved of their peaceful secession.

Perhaps the best way to sum up the situation is that, where communalism exists and builds into an effort to form a sovereign state, it will be beaten back if the country is one that is liable to the use of military force, especially if there is help from abroad; if the breakaway state has its own military force and can also get help from abroad, it may have a chance. The peaceful separations, meanwhile, all represent special cases.

What is notable, however, is how few successful separations there have been. There are numerous cases where communal feeling exists — as with the Basques, the Welsh and Breton nationalists, the Flemings in Belgium, the Bougainvillians in Papua, New Guinea, the Tamilis in Sri Lanka — but where, in spite of disturbances, no concerted attempt at separation has occurred. In a world of plural societies, how are we to explain this? It is always difficult to explain why something did not happen, but I think we must try.

Too Strong

My guess is that the force of one-country nationalism has been too strong. Thus the bulk of the Flemings, while often bitterly annoyed at the Walloons, have rationalized that they have more to gain from the state of Belgium than from the recognized state of Flanders. Those numerous services which Belgium supplies, Flanders might not be able to supply in the same measure. An independent Wales could not do for the Welsh what the United Kingdom does for them. It is only since revenues from North Sea oil became a prospect that the Scottish nationalists have gained substantial support; before that, it was plain that Scotland could not provide from its own resources what it got from Britain as a whole.

This situation explains, for example, why secessionist feeling in Western Australia has made so little headway, although on the surface, it has a strong case. It is distant by a thousand miles of sand and spinifex from the rest of Australia; it has vast resources of iron ore and other minerals for exports to Japan and Europe; it has a built-in feeling of resentment against the eastern states, which, in the opinion of many of its people, try to milk it dry. Yet the secession movement has little support. An independent Western Australia's capacity to defend itself would be either minimal or extremely expensive, such that the main proponents of secession have been driven to suggest that Western Australia could arm itself with nuclear weapons. But this prospect probably frightens more local people than it attracts. They are happy to stay with the federal government.

How successful are breakaway states likely to be? The most successful in recent times has been Singapore, but all the states which emerged from the breakup of the federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, and from the West Indies, have been successes too. A common feature of all of these was that they had effective administrative and territorial bases before there had been any federations to emerge from, and that they simply kept on going.

In many ways, these three federations didn't suffer a split; actually they had hardly begun. They were infant political entities, while the component parts were well established and had given up no more than minimal functions to them. They were not mature states like, say, the U.S., Canada and Australia. If a piece broke off one of these countries, it would be very different from the separations just discussed.

The conclusions are that states which break away from an established federation will succeed if they have firmly established governments, are accustomed to regard themselves as separate entities, do not have economic ties of a close nature with the larger entity (though this consideration did not apply to Singapore or Zambia), have not been caught up in its network of state activity and have thus not been affected by nationalism of a larger kind. It helps also if they are islands.

Citizens of new state of Bangladesh, the most spectacular modern example.

is Lord Acton's turn-of-the-century dictum that "those states are substantially the most perfect which, like the British and Austrian empires, include various distinct nationalities without oppressing them. Those in which no mixture of races has occurred are imperfect; and those in which its effects have disappeared are decrepit."

Acton's belief was that a mixture of peoples in what we would now call a plural society was a source of strength, and that those who sought a unitary society were condemning their state to deterioration. He also believed that Mazzinian nationalism led to tyranny of majorities over minorities, and so were to be condemned. Acton's view, while not directly applicable to present-day conditions, still has weight. When we see plural societies which appear to be actually working, like those of Fiji, Hawaii, Malaysia and Brazil, we are pleased and proud.

Turmoil Certain

There is a contrary view held by both Jean-Jacques Rousseau and Mazzini, that if two or more nations are warring within the bosom of a single state, the state is weakened and is doomed to perpetual turmoil. At its best, such an attitude is to be prized; at its worst, it is something to shudder at.

Still there is, in fact much to be said for the plural society, even though it may be difficult to govern. Canada, after all, has been called the least governable country, yet Canadians will all sleep safely in their beds tonight — even though a potential for social violence may be discerned below the surface. The plain fact is that most societies are plural societies, and that they have to learn to govern themselves. So far as the new states of the past 30 years are concerned, this process of learning to live together has been largely successful.

The strength of a plural society in political terms is in its capacity to include more than one kind of culture, which often means a variety of skills and connections. When, for example, the Chinese are part of a plural society, they bring qualities and connections which no one else can. The weakness of a plural society is the tendency to mutual suspicion and jealousy between the communities, by which a particular community identifies unfair advantage with another and then attacks it, sometimes by force. In situations of comparative prosperity these tendencies are likely to abate; often they flare up when the economy takes a downturn.

The cats wanted a conference. Here was a disagreeable development. It was bad enough having conferences with people. A conference is nothing but a committee of the upwardly mobile in search of a victim, and one of the chief reasons for keeping cats was that they hated committees.

I said I did not confer with cats. Grandmother, who had brought the message, looked pained. It was obvious she had made the mistake of conferring with them and they had taken the opportunity to warn her that she was not doing an adequate job and was likely to be replaced by younger blood unless she shaped up.

"Don't worry," I told her.

"They're not going to force you to take early retirement as long as I'm running things."

This improved her day somewhat, but not mine. The gall of it! The cats asking for a conference! I called a conference myself. Closed-door. Executive session. No cats admitted. Each member of the family had that hooded look of the seasoned conferee ready to buck the blame for failure to somebody else.

Yes, it was true. The cats had walked right in and spoken up.

"The cats are talking?"

They were. They had been watching pet-food ads on television and had seen other cats talking. They had even seen a dog singing Italian opera. The scales had fallen from their eyes. The spirit of feline liberation was aflame under their fur.

Here was appalling news indeed. Cats had been tolerable so long as they kept their silence. Now, in addition to the noise of family, phonograph, television, radio and telephone, the household was going to have to live with the gabble of cats.

Firm action was demanded. What was needed at this critical juncture was not russell baker

Dr. Spock but Spiro Agnew. He had always understood the evils of permissiveness, and permissiveness clearly was the issue at hand. Oh, I had seen enough petfood commercials to see which way the wind was blowing.

With the decline in the birthrate, Americans had stopped having babies and started having pets. The grocery industry, facing bankruptcy in baby food, had tried to salvage itself with a filler in pet food. You couldn't watch the tube 10 minutes any more without seeing some pampered, insolent beast turn up its nose at the leftover cauliflower and go into a sulk from which it could be rescued only by the advertiser's gourmet pet food.

These four-legged gourmandisers not only spoke an insistent brand of English, but also engaged in peculiarly arrogant acts of ingratitude by subtly tormenting their owners with suggestions that they were unworthy to practice the nutritional arts. The nation was raising a generation of spoiled animals. The infection had to be treated with powerful medicine. I agreed to see the cats, but only on condition that they not speak. One word out of either of them, I warned, and both would be put out of the house for a week to make do with the neighborhood garbage.

The spokesfeline was Alcibiades, a mangy gray specimen of femininity whom I had tolerated for 10 years without once receiving the slightest token of affection, even though one year I had slipped her turkey scraps from the Christmas dinner. Her colleague was a half-witted male, a black cat known simply as "the black cat." For years, he had lived under the illusion that he was a dog. He liked to retrieve thrown balls and lie panting by the hearth on winter nights.

Alcibiades bore a small placard which said "Power to the Pets." The black cat was wrapped in demonstrator's ribbon, on which was written "Dog Is Man's Best Baby Substitute."

Like the ruthless executive I am, I told them the facts of life. For years, they had idled uselessly around the house, doing nothing but shedding hair on the furniture. I had put up with that. A man can put up with a lot from any living organism that has the good grace to keep its lip buttoned. And what reward did I get? A demand for gourmet meals. Threats to verbalize. Did they think I wanted to listen to some mangy grey cat talking? First, it would be about food. Before long, it would be politics. Did they think I wanted to listen to an imbecilic black cat talk about the superiority of being a dog?

I let them make the choice. Long life on leftover cauliflower eaten in perpetual silence. Or the animal pound. They skulked out, knowing they had at last met a master. It made me feel dreadful. Could it be that I was incapable of love? Was it I who was the true beast?

At the supermarket, I spent a fortune on gourmet food, brought it home, and begged forgiveness. Alcibiades refused. She said I had brought her an inferior brand. The black cat barked an aria from Italian opera. The telephone rang. It was for Alcibiades. The Maltese tomcat next door wanted to complain that his owners didn't understand him.

HIGHRISES EMASCULATE?

DUNEDIN, N.Z. (Reuter) — Tall apartment buildings help to make men effeminate, says psychiatrist Daniel Cappon, professor of environmental studies at York University in Toronto.

"A man with no garden to dig or the opportunity to carry out masculine activities becomes passive and effeminate," he said.

Cappon also blamed tall apartment buildings for creating boredom, depression, early deaths, obesity and vandalism.

They turn people into urban zombies, he said in an interview.

Flying Response For the Mayor

SURREY — Mayor Ed McKitka received first-class service from the RCMP Friday night when he reported an attempted break-in at his home in Cloverdale.

Within minutes, an RCMP helicopter landed on the mayor's lawn to investigate. But police said it was not special service for the mayor and that the helicopter happened to be flying over the neighborhood when the call was broadcast.

Police said there was no sign of entry and nothing had been taken from McKitka's home.

RICHMOND — The liquor licensing branch of the British Columbia Liquor Board will take a close look at Ben Ginter's bottle-tops-for-shares scheme, branch manager Vic Woodlands said.

Ginter announced Friday his plan to give away 10 shares in Uncle Ben's Brewery for every 200 bottle caps turned back to the company from Uncle Ben's beer.

"Well, we'll certainly have to take a look at that," Woodlands said. "The whole thing's quite unusual, to say the least. It's something I've never heard of before. Sounds like everyone's being offered a piece of the blue sky."

WASHINGTON — Entertainer Arthur Godfrey's 1,967-acre Beacon Hill Farm near Leesburg is being offered for sale for $6 million.

Godfrey, now 73, acquired 326 acres and the six-bedroom, five-bath "main house" in 1946. Subsequently, he acquired adjoining acreage to bring the farm to its present size. However, he plans to retain a nearby 90-acre tract and a separate 29-acre contiguous tract on which he has a friend living with a life tenancy agreement.

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Quick thinking by a 19-year-old woman thwarted an assault Thursday. The woman told police a man grabbed her as she stood on a street corner and put a knife to her throat. The attacker said he was going to take her to some nice, quiet place.

The victim suggested her apartment and the assailant agreed. However, when they reached her apartment the man found the woman's husband waiting for him. The assailant fled and is still being sought.

PARIS — Margaret Trudeau left here for New York on Sunday after a brief visit to France on a photographic junket organized by a French mineral water firm in connection with a North American sales drive.

TORONTO — Bryce Mackasey, former federal postmaster-general, says he is willing to play the role of "marriage counsellor" to help keep Canada together.

Mackasey, now a Liberal member for Notre-Dame-de-Grace in the Quebec National Assembly, said the provincial premiers should be locked in a room for several days with Prime Minister Trudeau and "start earning their living" by trying to solve the problems of the country.

WILDWOOD, Fla. — A 15-year-old boy who single-handedly captured three armed fugitives is a "real hero in these parts," police said today.

Cecil Collier was working in his father's field when he saw 11 police cars pursuing a car through a nearby pasture. The car crashed and the fugitives ran into the woods.

Cecil ran home, got his 20-gauge shotgun and joined the posse.

"The kid ran up on them, 'arrested' them by himself and marched them out of the woods, with their hands held on their heads, to the deputies," the Sumter County sheriff said.

NEW YORK — Sherry Lee Clarke decided the Empire State Building — site of her hero's last stand — would be the ideal place to get married.

Her hero is King Kong. So Sherry, 30, and Albert

Jackson, 26, tied the knot Friday on the observation deck of the building where the famous film ape first kept the New York City police force tied up during his finest hours.

Cruise No Pleasure

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Robert Beddingfield paid $2,000 to become a crew member on a sailboat cruise to 17 glamorous ports, but he and nine other paying sailors say all they've had is toil and trouble.

"It sounded like a dream; I always wanted to go to sea," said Beddingfield of Denver, who answered an advertisement on the cruise. "So I check into it, and it sounds great."

"The boat is in New York. I sell everything and I head for New York. They tell me to be there Feb. 23 because we're sailing Feb. 25."

"When I get there, the boat's not even in the water. It's in drydock. I had to climb up a ladder to get aboard."

The 72-foot ketch Barbara, built in 1913, set sail March 17 but it's stranded here under coast guard orders not to leave until safety rules are met.

En route to Florida, the ship's co-owner was arrested, the boat was seized, paycheques bounced, the captain quit, one man broke his leg in a fight, and the crew has been subpoenaed for a May 19 coast guard hearing.

Bob Moffat, 32, co-owner of the boat, said the plan was to sail from New York to Marina Del Rey, Calif., where he and a partner run two other boats.

In Beaufort, N.C., police arrested Moffat. "It was something about $11,000 in bad cheques up in New York, which they paid off in front of a magistrate here," a Beaufort policeman said.

Then the boat was seized by the U.S. marshal for liens by New York boating-supply companies. It was allowed to set sail again on April 8.

"I've demanded my money back, but I can't just leave — I paid $2,000," said crew member Jim Eliason, 27, of Ontario, Calif. "But I'm tired of working to keep this boat floating."

Trudeau Laid Low By Snuffles

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau broke a minor tradition Saturday by cancelling his appearance at the annual parliamentary press gallery dinner.

Officials in his office said a cold forced Trudeau to cancel his appearance and a planned speech to about 200 assembled political reporters and political officials.

But Joe Clark, Progressive Conservative leader, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson; Gov.-Gen. Jules Léger and Bruce Phillips, chief correspondent in Ottawa of the CTV Television Network, addressed the gathering.

By tradition, nothing of what anyone says at these annual gatherings is reported publicly.

Trudeau is the first prime minister in modern history to miss a press gallery dinner. He has attended the last eight such, giving a speech-usually in a humorous vein — at each.

College Grads Jam Job Line-Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Canada Manpower report says there were 91 PhDs, including 18 university teachers, and 350 other people holding various masters degrees unemployed in the Greater Vancouver area in late 1976.

The report, called a statistical analysis of applicants registered at executive and professional divisions of the Canada Manpower centre here, also says a further 3,477 highly trained people were also jobless, including physicists, chemists, psychologists and biochemists.

The four-page report, dated Jan. 3, 1977, shows that 178 of 3,918 engineering, education, social science, medical, life science, business managers and sales-trained persons were placed in jobs in the last three months of 1976.

The report does not indicate whether those placed found employment that matched their training.

The highest number of placements was for diagnostic radiological technicians. Eleven of the 45 people registered in that category were found jobs in the three-month period.

John Baker, branch manager of the Canada Manpower centre at Simon Fraser University, said the three-month reports were used as a counselling tool to guide students in their career planning.

He said the reports injected a degree of reality into the career plans of students.

Dick Shirran, director of student services at the University of British Columbia, said many students with degrees were having difficulty in finding employment.

Shirran said there was an oversupply of some occupations.

Tanker Laws Ignored

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Atlantic Richfield hasn't made a single modification to its Alaska tanker fleet as a result of a state law designed to improve tanker safety, a spokesman says.

John Sullivan, the company's western marine operations manager, said Arco's ships already have modern navigation equipment and safety systems. He says the company doesn't believe all the devices named in Alaska's law are necessary.

Among them he cites twin screws or propellers, two sets of rudders and bow thrusters. They are aimed at giving the tankers more turning capability at low speeds.

But Sullivan said, "We don't see any value to them. They wouldn't increase the safety of the operation."

He said rudders don't fall off very often, but when they do "it would be at sea" not in Valdez Narrows.

He said Bow thrusters are simply a substitute for tugboats.

Bill Publicover, tanker safety specialist for the state department of environmental conservation, said these devices all would give tankers increased ability to manoeuvre in tight spots.

Winter Fooled Experts

RICHMOND (CP) — A climatologist says that B.C. ski resort operators who sweated over negligible or no new snow during the recent skiing season couldn't have been told of the situation ahead of time.

R. G. Wilson, head of the provincial environment ministry's climatology section, said in an interview "there is no way we could have warned them of what would happen."

Wilson, a panelist at a soil workshop, said his department makes weather-pattern forecasts by looking at weather recordings of an area for the past 30 years — "calculating averages for temperature, wind, precipitation and sunshine."

"B.C. tends to have sunny, dry summers and wet winters," Wilson said. "Last winter's high-pressure zone that brought the unseasonably mild winter weather broke the usual pattern for this area."

Some Inmates Unhappy In Fancy New Prison

MISSION (CP) — Some prisoners have already asked to be transferred from the new federal medium-security prison in this Fraser Valley community because they are dissatisfied with conditions, according to prisoner James Taylor.

Taylor, 35, who has served four years of a 16-year sentence for armed robbery, said some of the prisoners in Mission are bored and frustrated.

"Staff members aren't repressive," he said, "but they are scared."

"This place is set up for the staff, not the inmates. The people we are dealing with are good and sincere, but we aren't sure what they are sincere about."

Taylor's comments followed opening ceremonies attended by Solicitor-General Francis Fox, who said the institution is a symbol of the federal government's penal reforms and new approach to young offenders.

Taylor said the prisoners would like more visits by their families and more direct communication with the prison administration.

He said the authorities aren't in control of the prison and they're "on a bureaucratic trip."

"They don't want to make decisions," he said. "They seem to lack training."

"How are they going to take care of 180 guys when this place is full?"

Taylor termed it semi-obstructionism when he mentioned that prison authorities had refused to put curtains on the gymnasium windows so that the prisoners could watch television at night.

He added, however, that the prison is not a complete disaster for the prisoners.

"It's a good place," he said, "particularly for first offenders."

"But it could be much better."

Fox earlier told prisoners and other guests at the opening ceremonies that the Canadian penal system is moving away from statutory remissions to earned remission.

"We want to give prisoners an incentive to better themselves," said the minister. "But the penal system can't do it all."

"The system can't rehabilitate someone who doesn't want to be rehabilitated."

He said the prison is a prototype for four others to be built soon, with two in Quebec and others in New Brunswick and Kamloops.

Three masked men armed with a shotgun, a handgun and a knife held an elderly Maple Ridge couple and their six-year-old grandson hostage here for about 1½ hours Saturday night before surrendering to police.

A passerby noticed what was taking place and contacted police, who surrounded the house and established telephone contact with those inside.

Three men later surrendered to police who sealed off the area to traffic throughout the incident.

1 in 9 U.S. Doctors 'Impaired' Says Study

SURGEONS AT FAULT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A study prepared by surgeons themselves says the surgeon was at fault in 78 per cent of "preventable" complications or deaths resulting from operations in hospitals in seven states.

The other 22 per cent of "life-threatening incidents" were related to the hospital where surgery was performed, the patient or the community, said the study submitted to the House subcommittee on oversight and investigations.

"The majority of preventable incidents were surgeon-related (78 per cent)," it said. Technique was the most common factor with post operative care far behind in second place followed by a mix of inadequate diagnosis, judgment and pre-operative care.

A subcommittee study released last year found 2.4 million unnecessary operations were performed in 1974, resulting in 11,900 deaths and a $4 billion cost to the public.

CHICAGO (AP) — The chances are nearly one in nine, says the Illinois Medical Society, that a doctor is an alcoholic or narcotics addict.

And the American Medical Association (AMA), realizing the seriousness of the problem, is encouraging state medical societies to start campaigns to detect "impaired" doctors. The Illinois Medical Society (IMS) announced formation of its detection program at its state convention this weekend.

"This is a very serious problem and for the first time we are really beginning to search out and treat 'sick physicians,'" said Dr. James West, who is chairman of an IMS committee for the impaired physician.

The president of the AMA, Dr. Richard Palmer, estimated earlier this year that about 17,000 of the 408,000 doctors—one in 24—registered in the United States are "impaired."

But the IMS believes the figure is closer to one in nine. The state society estimates that of the state's 14,630 practicing physicians, 11.5 per cent may have a severe drinking problem, while 584 Illinois doctors are narcotics addicts.

Alcoholism and narcotics addiction in the medical profession are "higher than average because of the pressure doctors are under, dealing with life-and-death situations every day," Frank Chappell of the AMA said in an interview Sunday. He said that doctors have a greater-than-average chance of becoming drug addicts because they have access to drugs.

But patients shouldn't worry too much, Chappell said, "because most of these guys don't do anything until after office hours."

Many doctors are alcoholics or drug addicts and don't know it, Chappell said. "The big problem in this area is to get the doctors to realize they have a problem," he said. "What we've got to do is identify these doctors and make them aware of their problem before they do any damage."

Chappell said that both the AMA and the IMS encourage doctors and relatives of doctors with problems to tell their local medical societies.

A-Bomb Widows Sue

ANCHORAGE (AP) — The widows of two men who worked at the site of the 1971 Amchitka Island atomic test explosion have filed suit claiming the men died as a result of exposure to radiation.

The suit alleges that the federal government's negligence resulted in the exposure.

David Miller, a spokesman for the energy and research development administration, said he couldn't comment on the case because it was in litigation.

The suit was filed by the widows of Nick G. Aleck and Gregorio Reveles. The suit says Beverly Aleck lives here and Maria Reveles lives in Mexico. Neither could be reached for comment.

Aleck died of leukemia and Reveles of cancer of the pancreas, according to the suit. Both were civilian laborers at the site, but the suit does not say when they were there.

The suit does not ask a specific damage award. However, records indicate Mrs. Aleck had asked for $2 million in an earlier attempt.

Soaring Health Costs Attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Jimmy Carter, attacking a 1,000 per cent increase in spending on health care since 1950, was ready today to send Congress a proposal to limit jumps in hospital costs to about 9 per cent a year.

The proposal carries a double goal of slowing inflation in one of the most overheated parts of the economy and "laying the foundation or taking the first step" toward national health insurance.

Presidential assistant Stuart

Eizenstat, Carter's domestic affairs adviser, estimates savings to the public of $7.4 billion over the next two years.

He acknowledged that hospital groups oppose the proposal, but suggested their opposition would be offset by support from private insurance companies. The limit would not apply to government hospitals.

The proposal would be to discourage hospitals in small communities from duplicating each other by buying the same expensive medical equipment.

The administration has cited figures placing the increase in health care costs at 1,000 per cent since 1950. Eizenstat said the cost of hospital care now increases about 20 per cent annually, making it one of the most inflationary parts of the economy.

Eizenstat said the proposal is the first step toward meeting Carter's campaign promise on national health insurance, because any such plan would require some kind of cost control.

He said the proposal would save $2.4 billion in fiscal 1978 — $800 million in federal spending, $400 million in state and local taxes and $1.2 billion in private insurance costs. Savings for fiscal 1979 were placed at $5 billion.

Prospects of passage in Congress are "pretty good," Eizenstat said.

"We've never give hospitals an incentive to economize," Vice-president Walter Mondale said in a speech in Atlanta March 11.

He Was Lucky

A Quick-Thinking Bus Driver And Resuscitation Saved Him

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Edgar Hobbs, 74, was on his way to a Rotary convention at The Empress when he had a heart attack.

He slumped on the back seat of the bus. His heart stopped and he stopped breathing.

But Hobbs, who lives at 2746 Dover Rd., was lucky. Bus driver Barry Phill drove right to the emergency department of Royal Jubilee Hospital just two blocks away.

Within two or three minutes of the heart attack Dr. John Maccagno and staff from the emergency department were applying cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR).

With CPR the vital body systems of breathing and blood circulation are kept going until help arrives. Without CPR, the brain is starved for oxygen-carrying blood and suffers irreparable damage after about four minutes.

CPR is a combination of mouth-to-mouth breathing and rhythmic pressure on the chest.

Maccagno is chief emergency room physician among a group of doctors who staff the emergency departments at both of Victoria's general hospitals.

He recalls that it took about an hour to get Hobbs' heart going and his condition stabilized.

Part of the problem was getting Hobbs out of the bus, he says. CPR has to be given continuously so it was a case of inching him out at the same time as help was being administered. Down the aisle of a bus that isn't easy.

Hobbs was recalling it all in his hospital room over the weekend as he ate a hearty breakfast.

"I passed out and right away the bus driver took off for the hospital. He was smart. I think he probably saved my life."

No doubt about that, says Maccagno. But he adds that Hobbs was also lucky to be struck down so close to the hospital. He is willing to discuss the case because it underlines again the vital need to get more people educated in CPR.

In just three hours of one evening people can learn this technique and can save lives by applying it until the ambulance arrives, Maccagno says.

A CPR course is taught every Tuesday evening at Camosun College, with details available by phoning the college.

Maccagno says St. John Ambulance staff also teach it and there is an on-going course for staff at both hospitals all the time. Later this month there will be a course for doctors' wives.

CPR has been available to the public in Greater Victoria for more than a year, he notes, "but we're just sort of scratching the surface."

His aim is to get thousands of people, young and old, familiar with the technique, as has happened in Seattle where instruction is given in the school system down to grade 7.

What it all means is that some people who in the past would have died can be saved to live many years longer.

Barking Up Wrong Tree, SPCA Says of Charges

SHIELD TARGET $160,000

The Salvation Army has set a target of $160,000 for its Red Shield Appeal in May, the same objective as 1976.

"In spite of increased costs to operate the Army's many humanitarian services, we are attempting to hold the line and not increase the campaign goal," says general chairman Harry Young. "These funds are necessary to meet the anticipated operating expenses of the Salvation Army's social service institutions and I am confident Victorians will rally to ensure the target is met."

The residential canvass will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. next Monday.

Volunteer canvassers are still needed.

Those willing to help should phone the campaign office at 386-6304.

A Vancouver veterinarian says there is a dramatic increase in the number of diseased dogs and cats because of the low-cost services being offered by a SPCA clinic.

But Don Adams, manager of the Victoria branch of the SPCA, says the vet is barking up the wrong tree.

Dr. James Olafson, owner of the Central Park Veterinary Hospital, the largest animal hospital in Vancouver, says the animals are not given professional treatment at the SPCA clinic, leading to the spread of dog and cat diseases.

And it is not only the animals who are affected, he adds, as many of the diseases, such as ringworm and roundworm, can be transmitted to people.

Olafson said in an interview today the SPCA clinic, which serves Burnaby and Vancouver, offers low-cost spaying and vaccination services.

For example, he says, the clinic will spay an animal for $25, whereas the same service by a veterinarian would cost anywhere from $45 to $70.

He said he wouldn't mind if the SPCA would just do the spaying but by involving itself in vaccination programs and other preventive measures, it is getting into a field best left to the veterinarian.

He says the clinic does not offer full physical examinations and the animals are handled by lay people who have no training in the early detection of disease.

But Adams of the SPCA here disagrees, saying that there are two veterinarians at the clinic and there is no way these professionals would be party to shoddy practices.

"He's just upset because he's losing the gravy from the spaying and neutering programs," Adams said.

Adams said the veterinarians are involved in the diagnostic procedures as well as the delivery of anesthesia and performing surgery.

Adams said the SPCA does not run any such spaying clinic in Victoria. The animals that have to be altered are referred to a veterinarian, he added.

Olafson says the Vancouver-Burnaby clinic can offer low-cost services because it is subsidized by private donations and the municipalities involved.

He says the veterinarians have been working on preventive medicine for the pets and are disturbed at the effects of the SPCA's work because "we don't like treating just disease."

Olafson says the clients of the SPCA clinic are being "extremely short-changed" because their pets are not being properly cared for.

However, he does blame his colleagues for not pointing out the SPCA when it decided to set up the clinic and offer the vaccination program.

He has begun to offer free spaying operations on animals with a minimum four-month history at his hospital and he would like other veterinarians to follow suit.

If all the veterinarians did offer the free service, he said, the SPCA would soon go out of the business and then could possibly be persuaded to just stick to the spaying program and stay out of the preventive work.

Dr. Will Krutzmann, a veterinarian operating the Victoria Veterinary Clinic in the Mayfair Shopping Centre, says there is no problem in Victoria similar to the one raised by Olafson.

Removal Of Royalty 'Deplorable'

The removal of the Queen's portrait from the 12-cent first-class postage stamp to be released May 3 was today termed a "deplorable change" by Molly Ingram, chairman of the Victoria Branch of the Monarchist League of Canada.

A picture of the Parliament Buildings will replace the Queen's portrait. A Post Office spokesman said it is the first time the Queen has not been on the definitive stamp, although he could give no particular reason for the change.

Ingram said the Post Office could feature any pictorial theme, from flowers to Shakespeare, but still carry a small royal symbol in the top right-hand corner of the stamp.

"After all, she is the Queen of Canada," she said.

"Frankly, I think this is just one more thing which is being done to lessen the importance of the Crown, which to me is a terribly important thing."

She said she hopes Victorians will inundate Ottawa with letters deploring the new stamp policy.

Brief Charges Bias by CRTC

A brief prepared by Capital Cable Co-operative for a May 3 hearing by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission accuses the CRTC of practising "barefaced favoritism" and claims the federal agency is dominated "by the industry it has been established to regulate in the interest of the public."

The Victoria citizens' group, which wants to establish a community-based cablevision system in the city, will appear at the Vancouver hearing to oppose an application by Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd. to assume effective control of Premier Cablevision.

Among Premier's subsidiaries is Victoria Cablevision Ltd. A recent offer by Capital Cable Co-op to buy Victoria Cablevision for $4.54 million was turned down by Premier directors.

In its six-page submission, Capital Cable argues that the acquisition of Premier Cablevision by Western Broadcasting would "see an 'immense concentration of corporate power, the immense furtherance of the already alarming concentration of broadcasting and cable licences...'"

Western Broadcasting, controlled by the Toronto Star newspaper, owns 45 per cent of BCTV in Vancouver and also 68.5 per cent of the Vancouver Canucks hockey team.

Mentioning these and other corporate links, the group's brief says: "The great cause for concern is not only in 'licensed broadcasting' but also in the area of newspaper publishing — indeed, in the whole area of the free transmission of information."

It charges that the Western-Cable deal amounts to a "privately arranged" transfer of cable licence, but the CRTC should not grant licences except on the basis of competitive bidding from other interested parties.

Capital Cable, which has appeared unsuccessfully as an intervenor in a licence renewal application by Victoria Cablevision, says the CRTC is not fulfilling its "ordinary responsibility as a regulatory agency" if it condones the back-door acquisition of licences.

To do so while at the same time "closing the front door to legitimate applications from others is to condone partiality and the tolerance of special benefits as a commission function," the brief states.

WE'LL REGAIN OUR COOL...

Sunbathers' weather on the weekend challenged temperature records, but cloudier skies are forecast for the next few days.

A cool front from the Pacific may bring showers to-night along with winds in Juan de Fuca Strait, the airport weather office said.

Today's high was not expected to exceed 17 degrees, compared with 19 Sunday which tied a 1941 high for April 24. The airport also registered 19 Saturday, exceeding the 17.2 degrees for that date set in 1951.

Shot at Truck Nets Probation

A young Victoria man who shot at a truck in which his wife and another man were riding was put on two years probation today in county court.

Jack Douglas Haywood, 20, was ordered by Judge M. L. T. Drake to turn over his firearms to police during his probation.

Haywood pleaded guilty to using a firearm last Nov. 15 in a manner dangerous to the safety of other persons during a marital dispute. A second charge of discharging a firearm with intent to endanger the life of James John Warwick was stayed.

Defence counsel told the court that Haywood's wife had spent a night with Warwick and that they were on their way back to the Haywood residence when the shots were fired.

Counsel said Haywood had taken an extra dose of valium to calm himself but this had the opposite effect.

Talks to Start

Negotiations for a new agreement between the provincial government and the 33,000-member B.C. Government Employees Union will begin in Victoria May 12.

Union general secretary John Fryer says the first two days of talks will be devoted to working out a timetable for negotiations of the master agreement and the 12 component agreements.

The negotiations with the Government Employee Relations Bureau will begin less than two months after the formal signing of the last collective agreement between the BCGEU and the government. The 22-month master agreement, which expires July 31, 1977, was ratified in January after 13 months of negotiations.

KEY POSTS ARE FILLED

Two key municipal positions have been filled in Saanich. Alan Hopper of the city of Victoria's planning department will become assistant municipal planner June 1.

Arthur Wilks, formerly of Calgary, becomes personnel director on Friday. Hopper will receive a salary of $25,500 while Wilks will have a salary of $24,000.

Answer Soon on Student Jobs

A union spokesman said today the uncertainty surrounding 70 summer jobs for students in Saanich should be cleared up by the end of the week.

Paul McKivett, secretary of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 374, said the question of the wage rates for the students will be placed before a union membership meeting this week.

He said the union won't comment further until after that meeting.

A controversy has flared over how much the students should be paid, with the union insisting the summer workers be paid union rates.

Thirty of the 70 jobs would be provided under the provincial student summer employment program and pay $22.50 a day, while the other 40 jobs would result from Saanich council's decision to spend $100,000 of the municipal contingency fund for summer jobs.

Those landing one of the 40 jobs would be paid about $4 an hour.

The union agreed to take the matter to its members following a meeting Friday between union representatives and a Saanich municipal management team.

Ald. Joe Bourque, who proposed the job-creation program to Saanich council, said today he didn't know the details of what happened at Friday's meeting but heard the union had agreed to put the municipality's offer to the members.

"I doubt that the general membership feels the same way as the (union) executive," Bourque said.

The alderman said regardless of what the union members say, the ones to decide whether the jobs should be offered at the lower pay should be the students.

He said the union's suggestion that the students be paid $24 an hour is "patently ridiculous" but the students should decide whether they would be willing to work for less.

MUSEUM NEARS GOAL

NANAIMO — Officials of the Madrona Exposition Centre, the new museum at Malaspina College, are within $10,000 of a $50,000 goal for funds to finish paying construction costs.

An appeal for funds raised more than $40,000, including $2,000 from the Ottawa-based National Museums of Canada.

"The National Museums has now put $150,000 into this project (total cost of which is $295,000) and I am confident that the community will be behind us as we go all out for the remaining $3,104 we need to pass our objective," project co-ordinator John Char-netski said.

Other major donations in recent weeks have come from the city of Nanaimo ($10,000), the regional district ($3,000), CIPA Lumber ($500) and the Alotrusa Club of Nanaimo ($500).

The centre is scheduled for completion in June and the opening exhibition will be provided by Simon Fraser University. The display, Contemporary Canadian Images, includes graphic work from all sectors of Canadian society.

Rental Businesses Get Income Taxation Break

A federal trial court decision on a Victoria tax case will help small businesses across Canada whose income comes largely from rental properties.

The court has held that Cadboro Bay Holdings, owners of a shopping centre on Cadboro Bay Road, is eligible to receive a special tax rate as an "active" small business.

Victoria lawyer George Jones, who represented the company, said the decision is a precedent.

Jones says up to now the income tax department has disqualified companies in the rental properties business from claiming the small business deduction because such companies were considered "passive" in nature.

But in the Cadboro Bay Holdings case Jones was able to prove operator Lou Holker was actively involved in all aspects of the business, from signing leases to handling complaints.

Tax officials had originally ruled that notwithstanding Holker's involvement the firm was a passive operation. The ruling was subsequently overturned by the Tax Review Board and the department of finance then launched an appeal to the federal trial court.

The government could still appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, but probably won't, Betty Newton, spokesman for the income tax department in Victoria said.

She said since tax reform was introduced in 1972 small businesses' claim to the special tax deduction on rental income has been a cloudy area.

The court decision, she said, has established that where the principal officers of a company are actively involved in a rental operation the company can claim for the special tax rate.

The "active" small business pays a tax rate one half of what an inactive or holding company would pay on rental income.

NORAD Base in Edmonton?

EDMONTON (CP) — It's now virtually certain Edmonton will become a regional air monitoring surveillance centre in a territorially-revamped North American Air Defence Command, the Journal reports.

The newspaper says the centre, estimated to cost more than $25 million, will be located in or near the city in a few years. It would have the responsibility for monitoring and control of air space over all of Western Canada, the Northern Territories and the western high Arctic.

Not Switching—Schreyer

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer made it clear Sunday he has no intention of switching parties and joining the federal cabinet.

He also said he will serve out his term of office if the New Democratic Party is returned to office in the provincial election expected in June.

Schreyer made the comments to a reporter following a speech to an NDP nominating meeting.

The premier's future has been a frequent topic of speculation, especially since Prime Minister Trudeau said recently he has talked to the premier about a job with the federal government.

Schreyer confirmed Sunday he has had informal talks with federal representatives about a high-level job in the field of energy, but not about joining the Liberal cabinet.

However, he said he would not form a government only to leave it shortly after an election.

In his speech to about 150 party members, he said he wouldn't join the federal cabinet "no matter how great the temptation."

Schreyer has been preoccupied with energy during the past several years and said he believes Alberta's oil should be a fundamental issue in the next federal election campaign.

"There are a few places in the world today with unlimited spending power: Kuwait, Algeria, Arabia and Alberta," he said.

"Every time oil rises a dollar a bushel, it's just like putting $25 million in a suitcase and taking it out of Manitoba and giving it to someone in Alberta."

Finance Minister Saul Miller was nominated by acclamation at the meeting, and he said the next provincial election would be the last chance for the "establishment" to turn back the clock in Manitoba.

Dodger 'Run' Dance

By The Associated Press
When a player for Atlanta Braves hits a home run, Chief Noc-A-Homa does a "run" dance at Atlanta Stadium.

When a visiting player hits one over the fence, he sits it out.

Well, the Atlanta mascot did more sitting than standing Sunday while watching his Braves engage Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Dodgers and Braves combined for a total of nine homers. But the Dodgers hit one more and they had a 16-6 victory.

Three of the five Dodgers home runs were hit with men on base, including a grand slam by Ron Cey in a seven-run eighth inning. Atlanta's four homers were all struck with the bases empty.

"We hit everything they threw up," noted Steve Garvey, who contributed a three-run homer to the Dodgers cause.

The Dodgers homers started with Garvey's blast in the third inning. Cey's slam and Lusty Baker's two-run shot highlighted the eighth. Then Lee Lacy and relief pitcher Charlie Hough got homers.

The Braves got homers by Jerry Royster, Jeff Burroughs, Willie Minton and Gary Matthews.

In other National League games Sunday, Philadelphia Phillies beat St. Louis Cardinals 6-3, Chicago Cubs routed Cincinnati 7-1, San Francisco Giants edged Montreal Expos 6-5 and Houston Astros defeated San Diego Padres 9-8 in 10 innings. Rain postponed a doubleheader between Pittsburgh Pirates and New York Mets.

In American League action Sunday, Ferguson Jenkins of Chatham, Ont., pitched a three-hitter and Boston Red Sox blanked Toronto Blue Jays 5-0 before a Toronto crowd of 29,303.

Elsewhere, New York Yankees swept a doubleheader from Cleveland Indians 10-1 and 7-1, Milwaukee Brewers outlasted California Angels 10-9, Kansas City Royals beat Seattle Mariners 16-1 then lost the nightcap 4-2, Chicago White Sox whipped Oakland A's 12-5 and dropped the nightcap 11-4, Baltimore Orioles edged Detroit 3-1 with the Tigers taking the second game 2-1, and Minnesota Twins outslugged Texas Rangers 12-6.

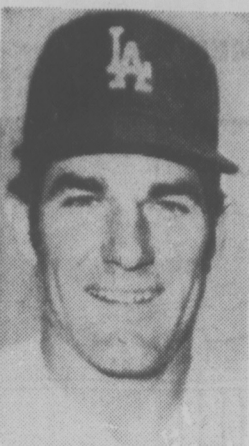

Willie McCovey's fourth homer of the season, a two-run shot in the fourth inning, led a four-run rally that carried San Francisco over Montreal.

Loser Don Stanhouse got into trouble later in the inning by walking Gary Thomasson. Marc Hill followed with a single and then Thomasson scored on a single by winner

Jim Barr. Hill scored on a single by Derrell Thomas.

Madlock's sacrifice fly produced the Giants' sixth and eventual winning run in the ninth. It was just enough to hold off a two-run rally by the Expos in the bottom of the inning.

Home runs by Bobby Murcer and Jerry Morales capped a five-run first inning and led Chicago over slumped Cincinnati. The loss was the fourth straight and the 10th in the last 12 starts for the defending world champion Reds. Murcer's homer—his fourth of the year—scored three runs.

Bakers Rally But Still Bow

NEW WESTMINSTER — Victoria McDonalds, with only four players back from the team that won the Canadian Junior Minto Cup title last year, came from behind to tie it up in the last minute but still dropped an 18-17 decision to New Westminster Salmonbellies in a Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League exhibition game here Sunday.

Down 8-1 after 13 minutes of play, Victoria gradually started to settle down and whittle away at the margin. The score was 8-3 after the first period and 15-10 going into the final 20 minutes.

McDonalds tied it up but New Westminster cashed in on a Victoria turnover in the final seconds to score the winning goal.

Doug Angrove led Victoria with five goals while Randy Bryant added three. Scott Browning, Jeff Whitney-Griffiths and Rhys Wicks each scored twice. Jim Boyd, Cleve Dheensaw and Tej Labh fired singles for the Bakers.

Jamie Robertson and Lori Gloeckner, both starting their second season with the club, came up with outstanding games in the chippy contest while Rick Bains and Bill Bendall combined to make 36 stops in the Victoria goal.

Mark Turra led New Westminster, which only had four new players in the lineup, with five goals. Jackie Fulton added four, Gary Lindsay notched three, and singles were added by Shayne Spring, Ken Brown, Dave Lamb, Rod Sepka, Mario Goveorchin and Sam Seaward.

McDonalds play host to Coquitlam 3-Hawks in their first home exhibition game Sunday at 2 p.m. in Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Victoria 'Y' Beaten In Volleyball Finale

MISSION — Mission downed Victoria "Y" 15-11, 15-8, 15-12 in the best-of-five final to win the girls' crown in the British Columbia midget volleyball championships which ended here Sunday.

Victoria gained a berth in the final by downing Vernon 2-0 while Mission won the other semi-final contest 2-1 over Kanatas of Smithers.

Both Victoria and Mission gained byes into the semis by compiling unbeaten records in preliminary round robin play.

Vernon won the spot against Victoria by downing Coquitlam 2-0 and, following the defeat, went on to win third place in the tourney by defeating Kanatas, who had gained a berth in the semis with a 2-1 decision over Winfield.

In the boys' section, Dawson Creek eliminated Namdor of Victoria 2-0 in one semi-final.

Crusaders, Hornets Down Bantam Rivals

Saanich Hornets extended their unbeaten streak to three games by bouncing Juan de Fuca Tigers 56-6 in Vancouver Island Junior Bantam Football League action Sunday at Cedar Hill Park.

In the other game, Oak Bay Crusaders also remained unbeaten after two games with an 18-9 victory over Cowichan Patriots at Cowichan High School in Duncan.

Brian Kennish sparked the Hornets attack by scoring two touchdowns and booting seven converts. Mitchell Holmes and Don Phillips also scored two TDs each while single majors were added by Chris Spargo and Sam Devana. Brad Witt kicked one convert.

Mike Brodersen scored the lone touchdown for Tigers. In the up-Island game, Brad Stevenson scored two TDs to spark Crusaders while Alan Paladini added one six-pointer.

David Marquis scored a touchdown for Cowichan and Parlad Dhut kicked the convert and received credit for a two-point rouge.

Cowichan Sides Split

DUNCAN — Cowichan of the Vancouver Island Rugby Union split a pair of exhibition matches against Meralomas of Vancouver here Sunday.

Cowichan I topped Meralomas 30-6 while Meralomas II beat Cowichan II 22-12.

Gerry Rees led the Cowichan firsts with a try, two penalty goals and two conversions while other tries were scored by Geoff Regg, Pat Simmons, Bob Price and Derek Sharp.

Red Bellis scored all the points for Cowichan II with a try, two penalty goals and a conversion.

One of the prime attributes of the expert player, namely, a practical imagination, is vividly illustrated in today's deal. It was put to use by our West defender who, if he had played normally, would almost surely have allowed declarer to fulfill his contract.

Opening lead: Eight of ♠.

Dummy's four of hearts played on the opening lead and East won the trick with his queen. East returned the three of trumps, and when South played low, West's king captured the trick. West played back his remaining heart, dummy's ace winning. Up to this point the defensive play had been normal, if one considers perfect defense to be normal. But at trick four an abnormality came into being. The deuce of spades was led off the board, East following with the three. South put up his king — and West nonchalantly played the four-spot! When his king won the trick, declarer was certain that East possessed the spade ace. So, at trick five, South led his remaining spade and inserted dummy's ten when West again played low. It was South's hope that West had the spade jack. East won the trick with the jack, and cashed the heart king. He next led the ten of hearts, which South ruffed with the ace. Dummy's ten and queen of trumps were now cashed. "Knowing" that East had the spade ace, declarer then led the board's queen of spades. When East followed with the six, declarer discarded a diamond, expecting the queen to win. But West's ace took the trick, and declarer was down one.

Had West captured South's spade king with his ace at trick four, declarer would probably have fulfilled his contract. Upon regaining the lead, he would have drawn trumps, and then led a spade to the board's queen. A third spade lead would now be ruffed, establishing the board's two remaining spades as winners. Dummy would then be entered via the diamond ace, and South's two losing diamonds would be discarded on dummy's spades. But West's "concealment" of the spade ace led declarer astray.

RACING ROUNDUP

Seattle Slew Wins Wood

Times News Service
Trainer Billy Turner was happy Saturday but even more important, Seattle Slew was happy and now the pair will try to spread some more joy for owners Karen and Mickey Taylor at the Kentucky Derby on May 7.

"I told Jean (jockey Jean Cruguet) not to worry," said Turner after the $110,000 Wood Memorial at New York's Aqueduct. "Let the horse run easy and move him when it is time, near the three-eighths or the quarter." Time came at the three-eighths pole, when Seattle Slew shot from a 1 1/2-length lead to a six-length lead in the stretch. At the end of the 1 1/4 miles, the margin was a comfortable 3 1/4 lengths, and the unbeaten colt had his sixth consecutive victory with a time of 1:49.3-5.

Sanhedrin finished second and Catalina was third, another 4 1/2 lengths behind.

In Paris, Blushing Groom, the Aga Kahn's brilliant three-year-old, already valued at over $5 million, won the Poule d'Essai des Poulains - the French 2,000 Guineas - with arrogant ease at Longchamps Sunday.

Making his move about two furlongs from the finish line, Blushing Groom charged easily to a three-length victory over Pharly. Hasty Reply was placed third after an enquiry disqualified Shinnar, the early pacesetter in the mile race.

In Vancouver, Scythian's Suite and Miss Streaker won their divisions of the Spring Fashion Handicap for three-year-old fillies Saturday at Exhibition Park.

Neither horse was well considered for the 6 1/2-furlong races, so both paid in double figures. It was the first stakes victory for both.

Scythian's Suite, the bigger surprise, moved from third on the outside under Gary Demoreest to take the lead at the top of the stretch and pull away to 1 1/4 lengths at the wire.

Miss Streaker, ridden by Ken Skinner, didn't get the lead until midstretch and managed to nose out Bold Tryst at the wire.

The winners collected $3,373 each.

At San Mateo, Calif., The Bulldogger overtook favored Truly's Easter to claim a three-quarter length victory in the $250,000 Golden State Derby at Bay Meadows.

The three-year-old quarter-horse, breaking from the 10th position in the 10-horse field, was fifth midway through the race, but spurred late to claim the $106,875 first place money.

Truly's Easter held on for second while Le Fleur was third in the richest race ever run in Northern California.

In other major races in the U.S., Flag Officer charged from last place to win the $104,925 Illinois Derby at Chicago's Sportsman's Park and now will make the trip to the Kentucky Derby, and longshot Cold Hearted won the $64,900 Poinsettia at Hialeah.

Russians Humiliate Team Canada

VIENNA (CP) — "It was humiliating," said Team Canada coach Johnny Wilson.

"I'm bitterly disappointed," said general manager Derek Holmes. "I thought we were going to make a much better showing."

Those comments came Sunday after one of Canada's worst defeats ever in the world hockey championship—an 11-1 setback to the Soviet Union which gave Canada a 1-2 record in the eight-country tournament.

Alan Eagleson, chairman of international hockey for Canada, was unavailable for comment as the Russians increased their record to 3-0 for a share of first place with Czechoslovakia and Sweden.

Canada, needing at least a fourth-place finish for a chance at a medal, dropped to fifth. The United States moved to fourth with a 1-1 record. West Germany is sixth at 0-2-1, followed by Finland and Romania at 0-3.

In other games, Czechoslovakia remained undefeated with a 13-1 triumph over Romania, Sweden kept pace with a 5-1 decision over Finland, and West Germany tied the United States 3-3.

The competition continues today with Sweden meeting West Germany and the Soviet Union taking on Romania. Canada returns to action Tuesday for a game against Czechoslovakia.

The Russians did everything in robot-like precision, methodically wearing down the Canadians with physical power. They only took shots on goalies Jim Rutherford, who started and allowed six goals, and Tony Esposito when there was an opening. The openings came often. The Russians led 3-0 after the first period and 8-0 entering the final 20 minutes before 8,000 fans, most of them apparently cheering for Canada.

The Soviet Union only had a 28-25 edge in shots but scored three power-play goals as Canada received seven of eight minor penalties handed out by referee Stig Karlsson of Sweden. He also issued a major penalty to Wilf Paiement of Canada, who clipped defenceman Sergei Babinov on the side of the head with his stick.

Alexander Yakushev paced

the winners with four goals, while Boris Mikhailov and Helmut Balderis scored two each. Valeri Kharlamov, Valeri Vasiljev and Victor Zhukov got the other goals for the Soviet Union.

Rick Hampton, converted to left wing from defence for this game, scored Canada's only goal in the second period on a pass from Walt McKechnie with Paiement serving his major.

Canada also lost right winger Jean Pronovost for the remainder of the tournament when he suffered a separated shoulder in the second period. He joins left winger Guy Charron, who suffered torn knee ligaments in the first game, on the sidelines.

The last time Canada took a whipping in world tournament play was in 1965 at Finland when Czechoslovakia won 8-0. That Canadian team included college players and seniors from Winnipeg Maroons.

Anatoly Starovtov, the secretary-general of the Soviet Union ice hockey federation, says he's happy Canada has returned to the tournament after a seven-year absence but added:

"But, the team that is here remains only to be pitied. It is a pity that the hockey people of Canada are represented by such a poor team on and off the ice."

"These are not players of the highest class, and, unfortunately, this lack of skill is supported by an open, unnecessary roughness."

Now Is the Time To Introduce Dave

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Some may ask about "Dave Who" for a few more days, but Dave Anderson took the big step out of the ranks of anonymity on Sunday.

Virtually unknown before the start of the 28th annual Victoria Golf Club member now can be introduced as a finalist in the 1977 Vancouver Island Open championship.

ISLAND OPEN RESULTS

Senior def. Harris on 19th.

Field Action For Selectors

RICHMOND — Vancouver Island I compiled a 3-1 record in the trials tournament to select junior and senior British Columbia women's field hockey representative teams here at the weekend.

Jenny John and Jan Crook each scored twice as Island I topped Vancouver II 4-0 and then Island I downed Burnaby II 4-1 on goals by Di Whittingham, Lynn Derry, Shelley Winter and Miss Crook.

On Saturday, Island I blanked Burnaby I 3-0 on goals by Mary Cavin, Miss Crook and Miss Derry but lost a 2-0 decision to Vancouver I.

Island II finished with a 1-3 record. Judy Broom and Stephanie Doney each scored twice and Cheryl Elvins added one goal as Island II topped Okanagan 5-3 but Burnaby I blanked Island II 5-0 in the other Sunday match and Vancouver I and Vancouver II posted 2-0 wins over the same squad Saturday.

Island III lost all four matches dropping a 3-0 decision to Vancouver II and a 1-0 loss to Burnaby II on Sunday and bowing 2-0 to Okanagan and 6-0 to Burnaby I on Saturday.

As it was a trials tourney, no winner was declared but Vancouver I was the only unbeaten squad. Team selections will be announced later.

Minor Baseball

LITTLE LEAGUE
Layrite
Royal Oak 5, Medallion 7.
Cooley 10, Carey Esso 7.
Stubbs Const. 16, Royal Oak 10.

The charge by the dark-horse and Jim Rutledge and the fall of the final professionals featured the quarter-final and semi-final rounds Sunday at Glen Meadows.

Although only 17, Rutledge's advance to the final was less surprising than Anderson's march or the fall of favored Bill Wakeham. As a two-time winner of the City Junior title, Rutledge is no stranger.

His 2 and 1 quarter-final victory over Colwood's Jeff Jones and a 3 and 2 semi-final decision over Dave Donaldson of Gorge Vale didn't raise too many eyebrows.

Anderson and Donaldson took care of the biggest surprises.

A son of a former greenskeeper-professional (Art) who won the Island Open in 1960, Donaldson made his big mark by eliminating Wakeham one up in the morning quarter-finals. But his hopes of following father's footsteps ended when he met Rutledge.

But there was no stopping Anderson. An Oak Bay High grad and now a department store employee, Anderson kept moving with a 5 and 4 triumph over Uplands junior Russ Reynolds. But the day's most notable achievement came in the afternoon when Anderson upset Uplands pro Don Billingsborough 3 and 2.

Anderson took up golf only about four years ago. He's not overly impressed with his driving, but thinks his chipping and putting are his strongest games.

He made good use of his "strength" to beat Billingsborough.

One down after nine holes, the dark-haired Anderson squared matters when Billingsborough bogied the 11th hole. Anderson went one up on the 12th when he dropped a 26-foot putt for a par.

"That was the turning point," said Anderson. "That was when I felt I could win the match."

He went two up when Billingsborough took a double-bogey seven on the par-five 13th. They traded wins on the next two holes and Anderson closed the match out with a remarkable chip on 16.

He ran the ball to within a few inches of the cup for a hole-winning, "gimme" par that ended the match.

Donaldson scored an approximate one-under-par 35 to charge into a four-up lead over Wakeham after nine holes, then held on to defeat the four-time champion from Cowichan. Still four down after 13, Wakeham won three of the next four holes to make it close.

Donaldson also started strongly against Rutledge. The Gorge Vale amateur was two up after six holes but Rutledge turned the match around by winning five straight holes, including birdies on the 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th.

HOULIHAN IMPROVING
VANCOUVER (CP) — Running back Barry Houlihan of British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference was removed from the critical 1st Saturday at Vancouver General Hospital. Hospital officials said Houlihan was in fair condition after receiving multiple injuries early Friday in a single-vehicle accident.

Houlihan, 23, suffered a severed thumb, broken jaw, leg fractures and lacerations, broken tailbone and ruptured spleen.

Both were injured in an auto accident in Bloomington, Minn., early today. Pazik suffered two broken legs while Carothers suffered a broken arm and a broken leg when their car collided with another auto travelling in a wrong lane. The driver of the other car, Cheryl Ann Petros, 23, suffered minor injuries.

Elsewhere and otherwise in sports: In Sheffield, England, Canadian champion Cliff Thorburn of Victoria took a 4-3 lead over Irishman Dennis Taylor at the end of the first session of the 35-frame semi-final of the world professional snooker championship Sunday.

In Vienna, Austria, Gordon Jukes said Sunday he is retiring.

In the Republic of Ireland in Prague, Austria defeated Egypt in Vienna and Yugoslavia ousted the Netherlands in Scheveningen.

Fibak made sure of a Polish victory by beating Uli Pinner, 10-8, 6-3, 6-4, in the first if the reverse singles. The final singles was abandoned because of rain.

In Denver, top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden overcame a faulty service with a steady baseline attack to defeat Brian Gottfried of the United States 7-5, 6-2, Sunday in the finals of a $100,000 Grand Prix tournament at Denver. Borg won $20,000 and Gottfried $10,000.

In Dublin, Ireland, a collection of Waterloo glass worth $51,000 and designed as prizes for the World Championship Tennis doubles final in

Island Teams Lose in Finals

BURNABY — All three Vancouver Island teams suffered defeat in finals of the B.C. Provincial Cup juvenile soccer championships Saturday and Sunday at Swangard Stadium.

The closest an Island squad came to victory was in the third division where Westminster Bel-Aire Saints shaved Alberni Athletics, 3-2. Vancouver Dunbar Sams blanked Victoria Lakehill Jansco Construction 3-0 in the seventh division final Sunday and Victoria Evening Optimist Patriots dropped a 2-0 decision to North Shore Burndett Beavers in the fifth-division final Saturday.

Joey Fatur of Alberni was the only Islander picked for an all-star team and Victoria Optimist Patriots were voted the most sportsmanlike team.

Grandview Legion of Vancouver captured the first division championship, Kerrisdale Chargers and Richmond Redco tied for the second division title, Delta Peace Arch Panthers took fourth-division honors and North Delta United topped the sixth division. Grandview Legion was selected the top team and David Woodsford of Peace Arch the top player.

Newcomer Gives Whitecaps Win

By The Canadian Press
Tony Funnell, a recent import from England's Southampton club, scored with three minutes remaining to give Vancouver Whitecaps a 1-0 North American Soccer League victory over Minnesota Kicks on Sunday.

The win, before 10,147 fans, at Empire Stadium, moved the Whitecaps into first place in the league's west division as second-place Portland Timbers lost 2-1 to Los Angeles Aztecs.

Funnell's goal came after the Whitecaps were awarded a free kick. From the free kick, the ball went to Bobby Lenarduzzi. Gary Thompson made a move for it and the ball ran through to the unmarked Funnell cutting in from the left wing and he scored from 10 yards out.

Three Birds Help Simons

HERMAN

HOCKEY TRAIL

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Three unlikely birdies put Jim Simons in the lead, but it took a late bogey to shake his nearest challenger in the $175,000 New Orleans Open golf tournament.

Simons carved out consecutive 65s Sunday for a 15-under-par total of 273 to claim his first victory on the pro tour. The golfers had to play 36 holes because rain delayed completion of the first round until Friday on the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course.

Savoring his three-stroke victory over the equally obscure Stan Lee, Simons pointed to two chip-ins and a 70-foot putt as the keys to his success. After Simons bogeyed No. 17, Lee needed only to par the final three holes to force a playoff. Instead, he three-putted for the bogeys and second place.

Lee carded a 70 and 69 Sunday. Finishing third was Masters champion Tom Watson, who shot 71-70 for 277. Next, at 278, were Lou Graham (69-69) and Ben Crenshaw (71-69).

George Knudson of Toronto, making one of his infrequent appearances this season, closed with a pair of 74s for a four-over-par total of 292.

Simons was three strokes behind Watson and two behind Lee going into Sunday's play. After the third round, he held a one-shot lead over Lee, Watson and Ed Dougherty.

Simons said he started thinking about winning the tournament after he chipped in for birdies twice in his first round Sunday.

"I was just trying to get close and it went in from 25 feet on the 16th," recalled the fifth-year pro from Tequesta, Fla.

Simons, whose best previous finish was a tie for third at Tallahassee last week, picked up $35,000 for the victory. Lee, who had won $203 before Sunday, got $19,950.

Dale Shaw of Victoria missed the cut on rounds of 78 and 75 for a 36-hole total of 153.

Hull Line Sinks Mariners

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg's hot line scored five goals Sunday night to carry the Jets past San Diego Mariners and into the World Hockey Association semi-finals.

Bobby Hull, Anders Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson shook off a four-game slump to pace Winnipeg to a 7-3 decision in the seventh and final game of the quarter-final series.

Winnipeg meets Houston Aeros in a best-of-seven semi-final with the first two games Tuesday and Thursday in Houston.

Hull and Hedberg scored two goals each while Nilsson added another. The line picked up 12 points, its best output of the series.

The three finally solved the close checking of San Diego's Kevin Devine, Joe Norris and Don Burgess that had frustrated them for the last four games.

"I was confident there was no way, when the game meant something, that their checking line could contain those guys," said Winnipeg coach Bobby Kromm.

"That's one of the reasons why I didn't get involved with line jockeying."

Nilsson, who had two assists also, said the line "just worked a little harder tonight . . . and maybe the puck was rolling a little in our favor."

"That line is so very explosive," said San Diego coach Ron Ingram. "We usually have a lot of trouble with them so I have to give my guys a lot of credit for containing them as long as they did."

On Saturday night Quebec

Nordiques defeated Indianapolis Racers 3-1 in the opening game of their World Hockey Association semi-final.

Paul Hoganson was in goal for Indianapolis Saturday but he will be replaced by Michel Dion tonight. Dion missed the first game because of a finger injury.

Racers' coach Jacques Demers said the long layoff after the Cincinnati series, which the Racers won in four games, didn't help his team, and he expected an improvement tonight.

SAN DIEGO (3) — Ray Adduono (3rd), Joe Norris (2nd), John French (2nd); WINNIPEG (7) — Bobby Hull (6th and 7th), Anders Hedberg (3rd and 4th), Ulf Nilsson (1st), Bobby Guindon (2nd), Dave Dunn (2nd). Attendance: 10,542. (Winnipeg wins best-of-seven quarter-final, 4-3).

SATURDAY
INDIANAPOLIS (1) — Michel Parizeau (2nd); QUEBEC (3) — Serge Bernier (5th and 6th), Paul Baster (2nd). Attendance: 7,399. (Quebec leads best-of-seven semi-final, 1-0).

Whitworth Gets 79th Career Win

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth fired a final-round 69, three-under-par, charging from behind to capture a $50,000 Ladies' Professional Golf Association tournament Sunday.

Beginning the day two strokes back of Pat Bradley and falling three shots down early in the round, Whitworth drew even with a birdie on the 128-yard seventh hole of the 6,123-yard course.

Another birdie at 16 gave her the lead for good.

Bradley, who set a tournament record with an opening round 64, lost a chance to pull even with a birdie on the par-five 18th when a 15-foot putt rimmed out of the cup.

Whitworth's 10-under-par 206 total was good for $7,500, placing her atop the LPGA winner's list for 1977. It was also her 79th career win, second only to Mickey Wright.

Bradley finished one stroke back and collected $5,040.

JoAnn Carter and Debbie Austin tied for third at 209 while Bonnie Lauer and rookie Debbie Massey tied for fifth at 210.

James Bay Youths Supply Excitement

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

No one was expecting miracles at Macdonald Park on Saturday.

An air of the inevitable permeated the grounds. James Bay Athletic Association would undoubtedly beat Oak Bay Wanderers (just as they had done on every other occasions this season) and win the Barnard Cup as Vancouver Island Rugby Union playoff champions (just as they had done for the four previous years).

They did, too, by a score of 31-9.

It was all so predictable that most of the 500 or so fans there hadn't gone expecting much excitement or anything out of the usual, either. But they were in for a few surprises!

With a powerful side that in a couple of weeks will defend the Rounsell Cup and bid for its fourth B.C. club title in a row, James Bay might have been expected to leave most of the work (and the scoring) to its more experienced old timers. Regulars like Gary Johnston, Ken Wilke, Darryl Noullette and Stu Barber.

But no. It didn't happen that way, and it was kind of refreshing to see the spotlight stolen by a couple of 21-year-old relative newcomers to first-division rugby.

Paul Mulholm, a lanky Claremont High School graduate playing in place of the Bays' resting second-row star Hans de Goede, set the field alight with some brilliant runs from broken play and contributed 12 points to the score with a try, two penalty goals and a conversion.

Winger Brent Racette, a strapping natural athlete who once ran from his home in Port Alberni to Victoria for exercise, was the other 21-year-old to impress. On trial now for a few weeks (up from the club's second-division team) and being watched closely by coach Tillman Briggs, Racette thrilled the crowd with his strong running and scored a fine try in the left corner.

Right-winger Rod Fiddick raced over for two tries, centre Barber scored a try and an outside-centre Mike Blades had a drop goal to round out the James Bay scoring.

Apart from Mulholm and Racette, the other big surprise of the day was the young Oak Bay team itself.

Shock finalists who were never expected to get past Cowichan in the semi-finals, the Wanderers looked easy meat for the "Monsters of Macdonald" to devour.

With Fiddick crossing for his first try in the opening minutes and the score soaring to 19-0 by half time, there truly appeared little doubt. The only thing in question seemed how many points the Bays would pile on before the slaughter ended.

By then, after the interval, came the surprise.

Down 23-0 now after an early second-half try by Barber, the lighter Wanderers badly beaten for possession in the first half, rallied bravely for coach Bruce Howe (standing in for the travelling Don Burgess).

At last they started to win enough ball to do something with and fullback Jim Wenman made a classic run for a try. Standoff-half Gillie Greig converted that and booted a penalty goal to make it a more respectable 32-9 before the Monsters took over again.

Earlier in the day, James Bay also won the Times Cup for the second-division playoffs with a 26-12 decision over Oak Bay.

Scrum-half Murray Allen scored 12 points for the home team with a try, two penalty goals and a conversion. The other James Bay tries were scored by Doug Archibald and Gerry Cadwallader while standoff-half Pat Trelawny kicked four penalty goals for Oak Bay.

Athletics Recapture Cup

Victoria Athletics squared the record for this season and took back the Jackson Cup by beating Victoria West 3-1 Saturday in the final of the Vancouver Island Soccer League competition at Royal Athletic Park.

Athletics won the title in 1976 but West took it the following season. Both went on to take the Canadian club championships.

On Saturday, the score was deadlocked 1-1 after the first half and the crowd of about 600 fans was treated to some rough but entertaining action after the break.

George Pinos opened scoring for Athletics at eight minutes and Rob Williams equalized at the 40-minute mark.

The goal by Williams was the result of a hotly-disputed play. He shot from a goal-mouth scramble and the ball was apparently cleared from near the goal line but the linesman ruled the ball had gone completely over the line before being kicked away and referee Denny Girvin awarded the goal.

Athletics got a chance to go ahead when they were awarded a penalty shot at 62 minutes but goaltender Jim de Goede made a spectacular save on John Nash's shot.

Frank Woods won a race with de Goede for a loose ball during a goalmouth melee and chipped in what proved to be the winning goal at 65 minutes.

Athletics maintained the pressure and a smart play by veteran Ron Thompson led to the insurance tally seven minutes later. Thompson chased a rebound to the touchline and flipped the ball back over his head to onrushing clubmate Dan Hood, who didn't miss on a low blistering shot.

That goal took some of the sting out of Wests and play deteriorated a little. Girvin was hard-pressed to maintain order and had to warn several players on both teams.

Wests settled down during the last few minutes of play but some fine defensive work by Howie Anderson, who was later named the most valuable player in the game, kept the attackers away.

The win tied the record at 2-2 this season between the two teams.

Athletics won the McGavin Cup earlier this season and Wests easily won the other two matches.

They get a chance to break that deadlock Wednesday while meeting for the premier division playoff title at 7:30 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park before both advance to the Province Cup quarter-finals on Sunday.

Athletics are scheduled to meet B.C. League-champion Italia-Canadians in Vancouver while Wests travel to Vernon to face the Okanagan League champions.

Flying 'Y' Warm In Frostbite Test

RICHMOND — Multiple victories by Linda Martin and Judy Tobacco helped Victoria Flying "Y" capture over-all laurels Saturday in the annual Frostbite track and field meet at Minors-Park.

Miss Martin won or helped in four victories in the pee-wee girls' division and Miss Tobacco, a member of Victoria Seaside in the newly-formed Western Canada Track League, collected three firsts in the midget girls' class.

Miss Martin won the long jump, shot put and 400 metre events and was part of the winning 4x100 relay team. Miss Tobacco won the 400 metres, high jump and helped clubmates Susan Kemble, Heather McDonald and Meghan Lambeth to victory in the 4x100 relay.

In the midget boys' division, Shawn Costello of Flying "Y" finished first in the 1,500 metres and clubmate Robert Abbott was first in the long jump. Flying "Y" teams won both the 4x100 and medley relays in the division.

Bantams also contributed to the Flying "Y" victory. Patricia Wellman won the 800 metres and placed second in both the high and long jumps while the girls' team won the medley relay and Brad Bueciss won the boys' shot put.

In the tyke boys' division, Paul Domke of Flying "Y" won the 800 metres, clubmate Brian Allen won the 200 metres and relay squads won both the sprint and medley events.

Victoria Track Club's Lawrie Sawyer won the pee-wee girls' high jump and clubmate Michael Willers topped the tyke boys' shotput.

Brentwood Rowers Win

MILL BAY — Brentwood College compiled 88 points Sunday to win its own annual rowing regatta.

Shawnigan Lake Boys' School placed second in the regatta with 52 points while Greenlake and Lakeside, both of Seattle, placed third and fourth, respectively, with 49 and 19 points.

Brentwood won the premier event, the senior varsity eights, with a time of four minutes, 34 seconds over the 1,500-metre course.

Shawnigan was second in 4:32, the Brentwood lightweight crew was third in 4:45 and Greenlake finished fourth in 5:10.

McMillan Top Rider

Dave McMillan broke away on the last of four laps to win the combined senior-junior event in the Victoria Wheelers' bicycle road race Sunday at Centennial Park.

McMillan covered the 60-kilometre distance in one hour, 55.46 seconds.

Finishing in order behind McMillan were Phil Carter (1:57:44), Scott Clade (1:58:33) and Michel Peron (2:05:19).

In the two-lap novice event, Ashley Walker nipped three other riders at the wire in a mass finish. Tony Waklin was second, Gerald Kersten was third and Phil Langrish placed fourth as all finished with a time of 63:48.

The next two riders, Brian Bates and Susan Blechschmidt, finished in 69:19 and 68:20, respectively.

Island Selects Share Honors

Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association select sides split a pair of exhibition games played in conjunction with a no-winner seven-side tournament Saturday and Sunday at Lansdowne Junior High School.

Island Selects topped a President's XI 4-2 Saturday but dropped a 3-0 decision to a Vancouver representative side on Sunday.

Arda Captures Dunlop Open

INA, Japan (Reuters) — Ben Ardan of the Philippines fired an even-par 72 Sunday to win the 72-hole $80,000 Dunlop International Open golf championship with a six-under score of 282. The tournament was the final leg of the 10-country pro golf tour.

Display Shows History in Unique Way

Anti-Smoke Campaign

One of the most unusual and social ways of presenting the history of a people will be demonstrated at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria April 28 to May 22.

Arranged and sponsored by Peggy Bartholomew, well-known teacher of embroidery in this city, it will take the form of an exhibition covering 300 years of the art of needle embroidery — or, to put it in a more descriptive way, "the embellishment of a woven fabric with threads of material."

The exhibition, titled Three Centuries of Needlework, will present a study in contrasts. There will be an original drawing for embroidery by Mrs. P. A. Traquair of Edinburgh, one of the leading symbolists in the art at the beginning of this century.

That drawing will be flanked on one side with an embroidery by her daughter, Mrs. A. P. (Hilda) Napier, who was active here in an early antique business started by Jessie Murdoch, Mrs. Bartholomew's mother.

On the other side will be a more modern color interpretation by Victoria's Mrs. Donald Cameron.

"This will point to a new era, a new point of view," Mrs. Bartholomew says, "and to a resurgence of interest here in Crewell embroidery during the past 12 years."

Going back to the Traquair drawing, the exhibition's sponsor speaks of this talented woman, whose name was widely known in the British Isles, as her "adopted grandmother."

This came about through Hilda Napier, who on the death of Mrs. Murdoch became "a beloved guardian... more like a second mother," and manager of the shop, a position she held until Peggy became of age.

Mrs. Traquair, a talented artist who painted murals on the walls of churches in England and Scotland, eventually discovered that the needle could be used as an instrument of self-expression, as well as the brush; that "all ideas and emotions were capable of being conveyed by an embroidery needle."

And, from then on, she rarely missed her daily hour at an embroidery frame, which she had created herself. Her work has been described as "embroidery needle-painting," for she used and directed her stitches to produce the light and shade and the shaping of her forms.

She made drawings of her embroidery designs — and it is one of these originals that will be on display at the exhibition opening Wednesday in the Art Gallery on Moss Street. Mrs. Napier, on the other hand, took up Crewell embroidery as a hobby while she was managing the antique business and while the young Peggy was in London taking a "crash course" at the Royal School of Needlework.

elizabeth forbes

She continued her interest long after she had retired from the business and Mrs. Bartholomew had taken over management.

When she was 72 (back in 1945) Mrs. Napier created a Crewell embroidery copy of The Pink Flamingo, a painting that hangs in the Victoria and Albert Museum in London. It took her 18 months to complete.

It is this exquisite embroidery painting that will hang beside the Traquair drawing at the exhibition.

Also among historic pieces will be an old-time embroidery frame — a facsimile of those carried by men embroiders, long ago, as they moved from place to place.

"It is interesting that in those times the finest work was done by men," Mrs. Bartholomew says, "also that one of the oldest guilds is that of the brooders."

Groups of men travelled in those days from one great house to another, she says, "staying until the work had been finished, then moving on, taking the frames with them."

In conjunction with the historic displays there will be a collection of embroideries of the late Nancy Pendray, to be shown once more through the co-operation of W. A. Pendray.

"This will, no doubt, delight many people who missed a short exhibit last year," Mrs. Bartholomew suggests.

"It will also give those who did see it the pleasure of viewing the work again under ideal circumstances."

"These pieces are perfect in technique," she added, "and they stand as a truly remarkable achievement for one woman in the short period of nine years."

To add interest for needlework buffs and to instruct younger visitors to the exhibition, there will be daily demonstrations at the Gallery from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. and again from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m., during the days of the exhibition.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute are trying to persuade young people not to smoke cigarettes.

It is part of a five-year program aimed at reducing smoking, particularly among teenagers. In a new booklet, a recent study was cited that said, "... even as the adult population is beginning to curtail its cigarette smoking, the young, specifically teen-age girls and young women, are now more likely to smoke and smoke more than in the past."

Currently, there are 50 million Americans who smoke cigarettes and the society wants the number reduced by 16 million persons at the end of the project.

STEAK IMPERIAL

1½ pounds beef round steak, cut in thin strips
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 can (10½ oz.) mushroom gravy
2 tablespoons currant or other tart red jelly
1½ cups sliced green peppers
2 tart cooking apples, cored and sliced
3 cups hot cooked rice
Combine wine and teriyaki marinade; pour over steak. Set aside while preparing peppers and apples. Drain marinade from meat and reserve. Sauté meat in butter, using high heat, until brown. Stir in gravy, jelly, and marinade. Bring to a boil. Top with peppers and apples. Sprinkle apples lightly with salt and sugar, if desired. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Serve over beds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings.

Hawaiian Stir-Fry Dinner

3 cups hot cooked rice*
2 whole chicken breasts (about 1½ lbs.), skinned, boned, and cut in thin strips
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 package (10 oz.) frozen Chinese style crispy textured vegetables with seasonings
1 can (13½ oz.) pineapple tidbits (drain; reserve syrup)
1 tablespoon cornstarch
3 tablespoons soy sauce
While rice is cooking, sauté chicken in butter for 2 minutes, using a large skillet. Add vegetables and pineapple syrup. Cover and cook 2 minutes. Blend seasonings from frozen vegetables package with cornstarch, soy sauce, and ¼ cup water. Stir into chicken mixture. Add pineapple; cook, stirring, until sauce is clear and thickened, about 2 minutes. Serve over beds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings.
* For added flavor, stir in ¼ cup toasted sliced almonds.

Keeping Those Gates in Line

By A. J. HAND

The weakest link in any chain is always the first to go. In the case of a fencing system, this weak link is the gate. Long before the rest of your fence starts to give you trouble, the gate will start acting up.

Often the first sign of trouble comes in the spring, after a hard winter has loosened the posts and attacked the hardware and gate joints with freeze-thaw cycles. Here are some common problems and their solution:

Sagging gate frame: If your gate frame has sagged so it isn't square, it may drag on the ground or fail to latch properly. The remedy is simple. Go to your hardware store and pick up a turnbuckle with eyes at both ends, two heavy eye bolts with nuts and washers, a coil of heavy galvanized wire and four wire clamps. The eye bolts should be long enough to pass through your gate frame with about a half-inch to spare.

Drill snug holes for the eye bolts at the upper hinge edge of the gate and the lower outside edge. Then install the turnbuckle and wire arrangements across the gate as shown in the sketch. Try to stretch the wire fairly tight as you tighten down on the cable clamps. When everything is in place you simply tighten up on the turnbuckle until the gate is pulled back into square. If it sags again at a later date, more tightening will solve the problem.

hand around the house

Tipped gate post: A turnbuckle and wire arrangement will solve this problem, too. It's quite common for the post to which a gate is hinged to tip over toward the gate opening. The weight of the gate pulls it in that direction. To correct the problem, just run the turnbuckle and wire from the top of that post away from the gate. See the sketch.

If the gate post is at the corner of your fence and you have no place to run the wire and turnbuckle, here is another solution: Extend both gate posts to a height of about seven feet. Pull the tipped hinge post back into a vertical alignment. Then run a cross brace across the top of the extended posts. This will link them together and spread the tipping force on the hinge post to both posts.

If that doesn't prove sufficient, nail a wooden diagonal brace running from the latch post to the bottom of the adjacent fence post. Be sure to pull the gate posts into plumb before you nail this brace in place.

Loose hinges: If you fastened your hinges in place with screws, sooner or later they will work loose. You could replace them with fatter screws, but eventually these would work loose, too. The soft woods used for fence and gate construction just can't hold screws under the strain of constant use.

Best solution is to forget about screws and fasten the hinges in place with bolts, nuts and washers. You can use the old screw holes as guides for your bolt holes.

These should be a snug fit for the bolts you choose. The bolts should be galvanized so they won't rust and stain your gate. Be sure to use washers under the nuts. They'll provide a much better bearing surface for the nuts than the soft wood of your gate and posts.

HARD WATER HIKES COST

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) — Hard water may add 10 cents to the cost of every load of home wash, says the Water Quality Association.

A study of laundering at Washington County Hospital showed that when the hospital switched to soft from hard water, the cost of washing supplies were reduced by about half and linen replacement costs by 40 per cent.

Overweight and Undernourished

By JENNIFER ANDERSON
Women who constantly diet often complain of feeling dragged out and run down. What's worse, most never reach their ideal of thinness, despite all their effort and suffering. They are approaching the problem the wrong way, and their looks and health suffer for it.

Ask Jennifer

In today's fast-paced world, grabbing a snack at a drive-in often replaces the traditional balanced meal at the family table. Many snack foods favored by North Americans contain many calories but are low in nutritional value.

Dear Jennifer: I am perpetually dieting, trying to lose a mere 12 pounds. I quit smoking a year ago and thought I would be so healthy and feel wonderful. But I'm exhausted all the time, and although I eat very little, I can't lose the weight. How come? — Arlene T.

First, check with your doctor to make sure there isn't anything wrong with you. Then consider the fact that you could be suffering from malnutrition. It's not how little you eat, but what you eat that determines weight loss. If your body is not getting the proper nutrients daily, your run-down, exhausted state is a natural symptom.

Here is a plan for you:

1. Write down what you eat every day — every bite you put in your mouth. Figure out both the calories and the food value. You'll be surprised how many foods are calorie-loaded and nutritionally empty. This type of food has probably been the mainstay of your so-called "diet."

2. Ask your doctor for a diet especially prepared to meet the nutritional requirements of a woman of your age and desired weight. You needn't starve. It will contain such good things as vegetables, fruits, lean meats, whole-wheat bread, skimmed milk. You may even feel that on this new diet you are eating a great deal more food than you did on your so-called diet. The difference is that on the nutritionally correct one, you'll lose those extra pounds.

3. Get your body moving. Start slowly: Out-of-shape muscles don't take to exercise gracefully. Your body was meant to work, however, and functions best when it does.

Exercise not only makes your body function better and gives you energy, but it burns calories, too. Also, it provides an outlet for tension and frustration — and some of that "pooped-out" feeling could be emotional as well as physical.

You've done a beautiful job in your dieting — now direct your attention to your fitness campaign, and I guarantee that within six weeks you'll feel and look better.

NO COMPLAINT FROM WOMEN

TEHRAN (CP) — Women customers at a Turkish bath here for years have admired the gentle touch of masseuse Soheila Ashayeri — until she got into a fight. Then police doctors found Soheila was male.

Police said: "So far only husbands and boyfriends have pressed charges. Not one woman customer has come to us with any sort of complaint."

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: For many years we West Virginians have been trying hard to let outsiders know that we are not all barefoot, illiterate, backward mountain folk. But no matter how we try to point up our economic strengths, our flourishing industries, our symphony orchestras and our cultural progress, someone always shoots us down.

The media also does its part by playing up every West Virginia coal mine disaster, prison riot, or national tragedy or scandal.

We are not all dumb hillbillies: Cyrus Vance, President Carter's choice of secretary of state, Robert C. Byrd, the majority leader of the U.S. Senate, Pearl Buck, the famous author, the late Pete Lisagor, a highly respected newspaper correspondent, Peter Marshall, host of the Hollywood Squares, actors Don Knotts and Buzzy Knight, and sport idol Jerry West were all from West Virginia.

We were very disappointed when you, Dear Abby, our favorite columnist, ran a letter in your column that read in part: "Should we allow our daughter, a fifth-generation American, to be married without dignity like a West Virginia Hillbilly?" — and you made no effort to correct that writer.

Surely, an enlightened writer like yourself can't share that bigoted misconception of our beautiful Mountain State.

I think you owe West Virginians an apology.—PROUD WEST VIRGINIAN

DEAR PROUD: You are right. I plead guilty to the sin of omission. I should NOT have allowed that blatantly bigoted remark to go unchallenged.

As you know, I try to keep my answers brief, but that is no excuse for failing to set that woman straight.

I didn't realize the seriousness of my mistake until I received an avalanche of letters from irate West Virginians.

I have learned a very valuable lesson. I apologize. Thank you for taking me to task. I had it coming! —Very truly yours, Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: About unwanted visitors in a hospital: When a patient has an unwanted visitor, if the patient will just close his eyes and pretend he has dropped off to sleep, the visitor will quietly leave.

I am a Gray Lady and I often suggest this to patients who complain that company wears them out.—GRAY LADY

DEAR GRAY LADY: Take it from an old Gray Lady (either way): Never underestimate the persistence of some visitors. Some have been known to sit for hours waiting for the patient to "wake up."

wheels

By MICHAEL LAMM

Dear Mike: I had my pinto tuned about two weeks ago — cost me $47.59. When I picked the car up it ran worse than before. I took it back the next day, and they fiddled with the carburetor. But it still runs very rough and sometimes stalls after starting out in the morning. What do you suggest? — WONT'T WAIT

Dear Wont't: A bad tuneup can be worse than none at all. If the mechanic didn't set your carburetor float level properly, or if he mistimed the ignition or messed up any of 100 other little things, he likely did more harm than good. Go back and raise a little hell. And don't let him sock you again.

Dear Mike: My 1973 Chev pickup gets only about 60 miles to a quart of oil. When I bought it new, it got around 800 miles per quart. The dealer says that's normal for the 454 V-8. Please comment.

SMOKEY: Dear SMOKEY: Your engine might not actually be burning the oil. Check for leaks. Check your smog system to see if it's sucking oil into the air cleaner. If it is burning the oil, though — no, it's not normal.

Dear Mike: To start my Capri in the morning, I have to pump the gas like mad, with the starter spinning for half a minute or more. The choke closes all right, and once the engine runs, it's fine. Several shops are at their wits' end. Please help — CRANKING

Dear Crank: Sounds like a pinhole leak in your carburetor float bowl. Sometimes a casting plug works loose. The leak drains your carb overnight, and your fuel pump has to refill it every morning.

Dear Mike: The dashboard lamp in the speedometer of my 1973 Valiant has burned out. The local dealer quoted me a price of $20 to fix it. Doesn't that sound awfully high? — BLUNK

Dear Blunk: Yes. Even if you have an air conditioner, it's a 15-minute job. So the total tab should come to $9, including the price of the bulb.

TECHTIP: Four- and five-speed overdrive transmissions increase gas mileage 10 to 18 per cent and pay for themselves in about 18 months of normal driving. They also increase engine longevity.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL: I received a large, lovely green plant from an elderly lady about four years ago. She passed on shortly after. She told me the plant was more than 50 years old and was a "cactus orchid." I kept it outside in the summer and bring it in during winter. It has the most beautiful large flowers I've ever seen.

Here's my problem: This winter it has grown such long arms that some measure 31 inches. I cannot get it through the door without breaking them.

Would it harm the plant if I cut them back or would it never bloom again? I love this plant, but if it gets much larger I don't know what I'll do. Any suggestions? — Gladys be cut back, which seems a lot simpler than reconstructing the doorways. Use very sharp scissors, garden tool or single-edged razor blade. Cut the entire "arm" and remove it easily by cutting into three-inch pieces, dusting with rooting hormone and popping into vermiculite. Imagine the wonder of it — a mother of dozens at 50-plus.

DEAR GLADYS: Your spendid euphorbia can indeed

Defectors Smuggled from Ireland

BELFAST (AP) — The Peace People, a group of self-styled "pacifist guerrillas" battling to end 7½ years of communal warfare in Northern Ireland, says it is running an underground railway smuggling defecting terrorists and survivors of assassination attempts out of Ulster.

"These are frightened people who need to get out or be killed," said Betty Williams, co-founder of the most successful peace movement in northern Ireland since Roman Catholics and Protestants started killing each other in August 1969.

"We've helped more than 50 men and women get out in the last few months," Mrs. Williams said. "This is what the movement's all about."

In Belfast's Catholic and Protestant districts, the crucibles of the sectarian conflict where most of the terrorists live their clandestine lives, the underground railway is known as the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

This was the name given to the network of jungle trails along which North Vietnam sent troops and supplies to the Viet Cong in South Vietnam.

Mrs. Williams, a 22-year-old Catholic housewife in Belfast's turbulent Andersonstown quarter, was interviewed shortly before leaving for a month's tour of U.S. cities to appeal to Irish-Americans to stop giving money to organizations fronting for Irish Catholic or Protestant extremists.

The underground railway, said Mrs. Williams, "is the gritty gritty work of peace."

"It's a way of reducing the violence. We've got a good network set up, and our operation's well under way now."

She stressed that her Peace People are not aiding wanted terrorists or criminals to escape. They aim only to help members of the IRA, of the Protestant Ulster Defence Association or of other extremist groups who risk death if they try to quit their groups.

The Peace People movement was born last Aug. 10 after a runaway IRA car killed three children in Belfast during a gun battle between guerrillas and British troops.

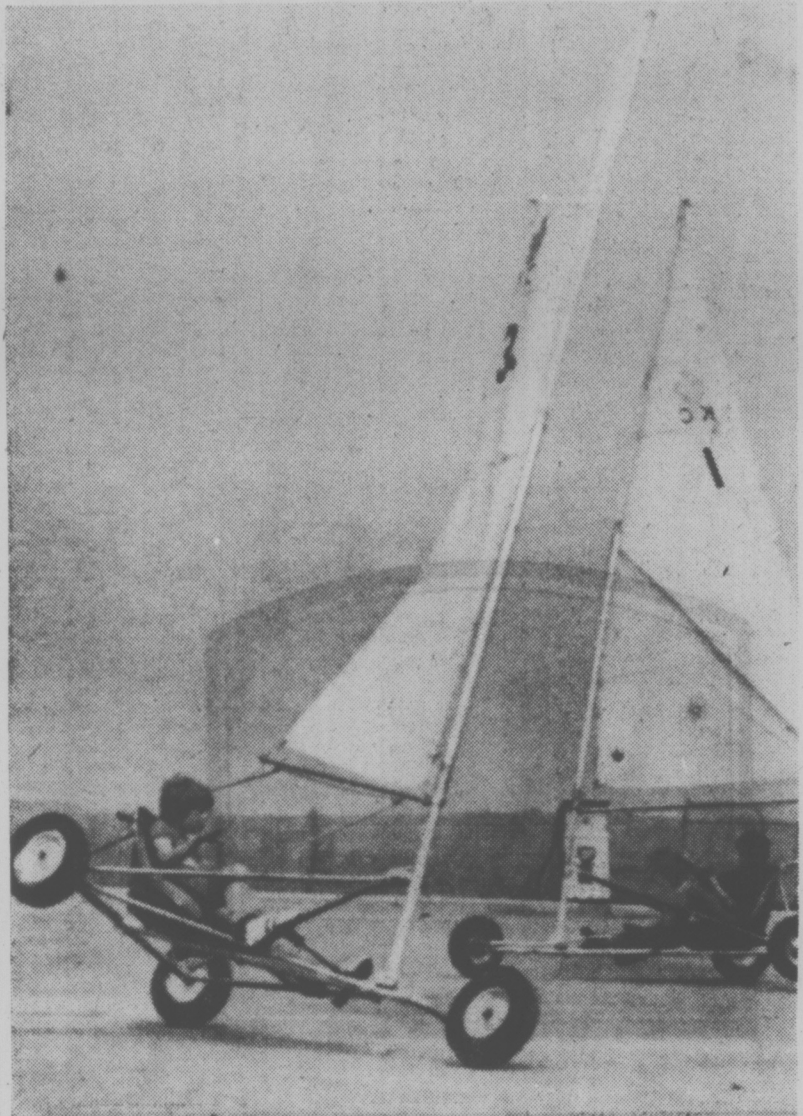

Since December, the movement's leaders have been organizing the campaign at grassroots level into a force that seeks to transform Ulster's feuding society, through self-help projects, co-operative factories and weaning people away from the politics of violence.

Mrs. Williams declined to disclose details of the underground railway. But informed sources close to the pacifists said the organization provides money and addresses of sympathizers in England and on the European continent, particularly in Scandinavia, for people who need to get out of Northern Ireland.

Claran McKeown, a former journalist who is a member of the Peace People's leadership, said last month that the organization runs a "rehabilitation centre" on the Continent for people who defect from terrorist groups.

He refused to say where the centre is located.

WIND BUGGIES offers lots of fun for Kitchener, Ont., public school students. The school has rented the buggies as part of physical education program, although they have no brakes and they easily spill, claim their critics.

QUEEN TO SHARE 12-CENT SPOT

OTTAWA (CP) — Two definitive 12-cent stamps will be issued, the post office said today, clarifying a Friday statement that the Queen would be replaced by the Parliament Buildings on the stamp.

The regular definitive with the Queen on it would be joined by a definitive showing the Parliament Buildings.

A definitive stamp is a regular-issue stamp that is available at all times. It differs from a commemorative stamp which features personalities or events for a limited period.

The new definitive will be issued May 3, the post office said.

Meanwhile, six new stamps in low-value denominations were issued April 22 to replace the series depicting former Canadian prime ministers.

The wildflower stamps of one through five cents and 10 cents emphasize the natural aspects of the country.

Leaders Wrap Up At Bilderberg

GROMYKO VISITS

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko arrived here today for talks with Indian leaders which are expected to chart the course for Indo-Soviet relations in the post-Indira Gandhi era.

Gromyko's three-day visit, which includes meetings with Prime Minister Joraji Desai and External Affairs Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee, marks the first top-level talks between Moscow and New Delhi since the new Janata party government took office here last month.

TORQUAY, England (UPI) — The 25th Bilderberg Conference has ended with its British chairman giving a rare glimpse in general terms of what is uppermost on the minds of influential leaders in North America and Europe.

"We discussed the European-American relationship in its different fields and the co-tween the developed and the developing world," Lord Home said Sunday.

The talks brought together about 100 influential North Americans and Western Europeans from 20 countries for closed-door discussions.

Participants included former secretary of state Henry Kissinger, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns.

They sat for 2½ days at five semi-circular tables draped in green baize discussing world affairs with the giants of industry and finance such as Fiat president Giovanni Agnelli, Chase Manhattan Bank chairman David Rockefeller and French banker Edmond de Rothschild.

Cabinet ministers from most West European nations, and a host of top-level union leaders and economists also attended the talks at the luxury Imperial Hotel in Torquay, a resort centre on the blustery coast of southwestern England.

Lord Home said the participants left according to plan without proposing any resolutions, taking any notes, drawing any conclusions or issuing any policy statements.

What was said remained secret under the strict rules of the privately-financed Bilderberg meetings, which dictate that no participant ever is quoted. Even the full report of the talks to be distributed later will identify speakers only by country.

Lord Home, the former British Conservative party Prime Minister, Sir Alec Douglas-Home, said during an almost unprecedented news conference after the talks that "It is just a meeting where people enjoy meeting in private and talking in private without anything being attributed to any individual outside."

Innocence Proof Mislaid: Eban

TEL AVIV (AP) — Former Israeli foreign minister Abba Eban is looking for a slip of paper which he says proves his foreign bank accounts are legal, unlike those that brought the downfall of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Israeli officials learned last week that Eban held bank accounts abroad.

Rabin admitted the two accounts he and his wife held in Washington were in violation of Israel's strict foreign currency laws and stepped out of politics.

But Eban insisted the treasury gave him special permission 10 years ago to have foreign accounts. Newspapers said he had four—three in the United States and one in London.

Eban said the accounts are necessary to finance his literary and academic activities abroad. He frequently travels outside Israel to lecture, and has published books in the United States.

But he says the treasury form granting the permission is buried in the old bank chits, bills and receipts that Israel must keep for at least seven years. The treasury also cannot find a copy.

Eban's case is further complicated by a 1975 treasury regulation requiring all foreign currency permits to be renewed. Eban says he was not told of the new rule and never renewed his.

He was not alone. The Haaretz newspaper reported that only 350 Israelis submitted applications to the treasury in compliance with the new order—only a fraction of those with foreign accounts.

Eban was forced to resign along with former prime minister Golda Meir following public anger over Israel's unreadiness for the 1973 Middle East war.

When Rabin stepped down, Eban, 62, came out of semi-retirement to join a political coalition with Defence Minister Shimon Peres to lead the Labor party.

World Bank Re-Appoints McNamara

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The World Bank announced Sunday the reappointment of Robert McNamara, president since 1968, to a third five-year term beginning April 1, 1978.

The announcement said McNamara, 60, agreed to serve another term as president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, of the International Finance Corporation Development Association.

Budworm Chemical 'Safe', But Mixer Questionable

5% GROWTH NONSENSE: ECONOMIST

TORONTO (CP) — Scientists J. Tuzo Wilson said Sunday it is nonsense for economists, governments and newspapers to be saying the country must get back to a steady five-per-cent economic growth rate.

Wilson, director of the Ontario Science Centre, told the Canadian Institute of Strategic Studies that steady growth has been considered the fountain of prosperity for 200 years but it holds little promise for the future.

He said an annual growth of seven per cent means a doubling of the economy every 12 years.

Wilson said he was skeptical about Canada's resources policy when there are the same number of atomic reactors in the country about two dozen — as there are solar-heated houses.

Wilson said the country should be planting fast-growing trees because wood can be transformed easily into gas or oil and he urged the creation of plans to convert coal into alternative fuels.

OTTAWA (CP) — "Fenitrothion, the chemical used in spruce budworm spraying, probably is safe but the additives used to mix it into spray form may be the root of some health problems, experts at a three-day symposium on the chemical concluded Friday.

Ken Rozee, a Dalhousie University researcher, said more research needs to be done into emulsifiers, used to mix oily particles into solutions, since research has linked the emulsifier used in spruce budworm spraying with the appearance in Eastern Canada of a rare, sometimes fatal children's disease called Reye's syndrome.

Rozee said Reye's syndrome is a multifactorial disease — no one yet knows exactly what causes it — and some scientists feel the emulsifier may act as a trigger, making the body more vulnerable to virus infections.

He said there is "an association" between influenza virus outbreaks and the appearance of Reye's syndrome. A similar association exists between measles virus and multiple sclerosis, another multifactorial disease about which little is known, he said.

Rozee speculated that man-made chemicals, such as emulsifiers, may act as "virus enhancers."

J. F. Crocker, the Dalhousie University researcher who first pointed out the possible link between the spruce budworm spray program and the appearance of Reye's syndrome in New Brunswick, said the maritime province isn't the only province to report the disease.

He said Ontario has had 30 cases of the syndrome since 1965, and Quebec, which had no cases prior to 1970, now reports 22 and that both have spruce budworm spraying operations. In comparison, New Brunswick has had 10 cases of Reye's Syndrome since 1970.

He said the situation seems worse in New Brunswick than in other provinces because New Brunswick is the only province with a spruce budworm spraying program, which has supported researcher's efforts to get to the bottom of the Reye's syndrome question.

Patrick McTaggart-Cowan, former chairman of the Science Council, who chaired the discussion after symposium papers were delivered, asked what effect breathing fenitrothion spray has on human health.

Rozee told him no one is sure and that up to half the spray used in the budworm program seems to drift away from the spray site and cannot be accounted for by measurements taken on trees or soil.

Clark Made It Easy To Leave—Horner

OTTAWA (CP) — Jack Horner says Joe Clark might have persuaded him to remain within the Progressive Conservative party. Instead, Clark laughed when Horner said he might leave the party.

"Joe Clark as leader of the Conservative party made it easy for me to leave," Horner, now a minister without portfolio in the Trudeau cabinet, said in an interview on the CTV television network's Question Period for broadcast Sunday.

Horner said the Liberal party approached him last October and things became serious March 10 when James Cootes, principal secretary to the prime minister, invited him to dinner.

Horner said 24 hours after he met Cootes, he told Clark about the meeting but Clark thought "it was something I had manufactured to aggrandize myself in his eyes or in the Conservative party's eyes."

Horner said he talked to Clark again after seeing Trudeau on April 4 — but Clark laughed.

"Yes, he laughed and said he wasn't surprised. He said that he thought that they would have been after Claude Wagner first before they were after me."

Horner, MP for the Alberta riding of Crowfoot, and Wagner, MP for the Quebec riding of Saint-Hyacinthe, opposed Clark at the party leadership convention a year ago.

Asked if Clark could have persuaded him to remain within the Conservative party, Horner said:

"I think he could have. I think he could have clearly stated that 'the Conservative party needs you and I need you and I value you and I want you to stay.'"

But Clark showed no enthusiasm in asking him to stay and "it made me very sad."

"All of that just gave me the impression that why am I banging my head against the wall and agonizing over staying in the party when it appears to me they don't even want me. So that's why I say it looked like he made it easier for me to go."

Horner said after 19 years as a Conservative in "a long, long history of Conservatives in the Horner family" — Hugh Horner, Alberta's deputy premier and minister of transportation, is a brother — "it was a most difficult question."

Horner said he decided to join Trudeau's team because "I'd like to think that the prime minister has asked me to help him hold the country together economically and emotionally and I weighed everything very, very, very carefully."

ANNUAL SEAL HUNT ENDS

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The seal hunt for large ships off northern Newfoundland officially ended Sunday but the six Canadian and five Norwegian vessels all had left the ice several days earlier.

Canadian vessels wound up with 46,700 harp seals, well below their quota of 62,000. The Norwegians exceeded their 35,000 quota by 500, federal officials said.

MONTREAL (CP) — Thirteen major corporations have produced a study saying Quebec could lose up to a billion dollars if they decide to pull their head offices out of the province.

Bernard Finestone, president of the Montreal Board of Trade, described the report's conclusions as spelling out potential disaster for the Quebec economy if the Parti Quebecois pursued its proposed language policies.

$1B Loss If Offices Go

The companies participating in the private study are considered to represent one-third of the province's total head office activity.

Consolidated-Bathurst president William Turner said in an interview that the study had not been done to "threaten the provincial government, but to show the value of head offices."

"There are plenty of small foreign countries who are crying for head offices to locate for the side benefits," Turner said.

The study, co-ordinated by private financial consultant John Dobson, indicates that the 13 companies directly contributed $430 million to the provincial economy and one billion dollars indirectly.

The study also says that the head offices of the 13 major corporations directly provided 13,250 jobs and some 40,000 jobs indirectly.

"The provincial government doesn't seem to realize that in this city head offices count as a major industry," said a spokesman for one of the corporations.

Ottawa To Hire Natives

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand says he will try to bring more Indian leaders into his department so that it will be sensitive to the needs of native people.

"I always felt uneasy about the situation where white people ran things for Indian people. It smacked for real colonialism," he said in an interview with Patrick Watson on the CBC television network's Watson Report.

"People say Canada isn't a colonial power. In fact, our relationships with the native people of this country were colonial. So we've tried to bring in outstanding Indian leaders, not just as tokens, but people who are competent and because they are sensitive to Indian people's needs."

Allmand called Harold Cardinal, the department's new regional director-general for Alberta, "a controversial figure."

Cardinal, former president of the Indian Association of Alberta, has been criticized for moving six senior department officials, all white, into a windowless basement and for hiring members of the American Indian Movement. One Indian leader, Chief John Snow of the Stony band, called Cardinal the worst Indian affairs director in 100 years.

Metal Strike Deadlocked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister Allan Williams said Sunday he has no plans at this time to step into the Lower Mainland metal industries dispute, which has tied up 38 companies for almost four weeks.

The 1,200 members of the United Steelworkers of America employed by the companies voted last week to reject what the metal industries association called its final contract offer.

No new talks are scheduled. Association spokesman Jim Riley says it will likely be a long strike.

Williams said the two sides have had the services of mediators at their disposal for quite some time.

Canadian sports writers who covered Team Canada's humiliating 11-1 loss to the Soviet Union in the world hockey championship in Vienna Sunday are almost unanimous in criticizing the actions of some Canadian players.

"It was the way they lost that Canadians should be ashamed of," wrote Jean Acoit in Montreal Matin. "Wilt Paiement and Walt McKechnie again acted like savages and they have begun to specialize in tarnishing the image of Canadian hockey abroad."

"Canadian professional hockey was utterly humiliated," said Southern columnist Jim Coleman. "The manner in which some of our professionals acted last night will be a lasting embarrassment to North America which long has prided itself on being the best in the world."

Paiement, the Colorado Rockies forward who took 11 minutes in penalties, was singled out for particular criticism.

Donald Ramsay in the Toronto Globe and Mail quoted Paiement as saying: "I had nothing to lose. The game was over. I figured I could hurt somebody, make them think twice in the next game. I always like to win."

With the Russians leading 10-1, Paiement slashed Sergei Babinov and took a five-minute penalty.

Coleman and others singled out Paiement, McKechnie, Greg Smith and captain Phil Esposito as Canadian players who declined to remove their helmets while the Soviet national anthem was being played.

"McKechnie not only forgot to remove his headpiece but slouched disdainfully, his chin resting on both gloved hands atop his hockey stick."

Bertrand Raymond of Le Journal de Montreal wrote that if the team was at all strength, coach Johnny Wilson and general manager Derek Holmes could have benched Paiement "but they seem to need him."

"Paiement tried to injure his opponents again... His disgraceful attitude has begun to seriously embarrass team officials."

Spewing Oil Plug Readied

Times News Services

STAVANGER, Norway — All emergency operations at Bravo platform, site of Europe's worst oil spill disaster, were called off today because of rough seas in the Norwegian Ekofisk Field in the North Sea.

A barge, the Chocotaw, with heavy equipment had anchored near the runaway rig in hopes that it could begin preliminary work toward capping the rig spewing 4,000 tons of oil and mud unchecked into the North Sea for the third day. But wind-whipped seas interfered with the plans.

"The Chocotaw barge was towed off location at 2 p.m. due to rising weather with winds running at about 32 knots," said Ken Laird, industrial relations supervisor for the American Phillips Petroleum Company, operators of the field.

"The wind is expected to drop to about 15 knots and be variable by Tuesday morning. At that time the barge will be moved back into position to resume preparatory work for capping the well," Laird said.

An international fleet of pollution control vessels had converged today on the runaway oil rig amid hopes that the full-scale capping operation could get under way Tuesday.

Boots Hansen and Richard Hattenberg, two of oil well fire-fighters Red Adair's men, were put aboard the oil-covered drilling rig atop the well Sunday.

They said that the leak was on the rig itself and that the underwater portion of the well was undamaged. It was hoped that the flow could be stopped with a device called a Christmas tree, a multi-valve tool that is put atop new wells to stop the oil flow until production plans are decided.

After blowing eight to 10 knots from the north and north-east during the weekend, the wind shifted this morning and dropped to a light two-knot breeze from the south.

But "the wind will increase gradually and by midnight it is expected to reach more than 10 knots," the Norwegian Meteorological Institute said. "Tuesday and Wednesday we expect it to increase to light gale force from the south and southwest."

"This will not have much influence on the drifting of the main oil slick, but it may make working conditions aboard the rig more difficult for the experts."

The blowout has created a 12-mile oil slick drifting back and forth in the area. The slick was estimated at two to five miles wide.

BANDIT GETS $1,200

A stocky, quiet-spoken man with a revolver tucked in his belt Sunday night escaped with $1,200 from the White Spot Restaurant at Douglas and Caledonia.

Assistant manager Cheryl Gibb said today the robber was "just lucky" to get that much money. She wouldn't elaborate.

The man entered the restaurant at 8:10 and quietly told 19-year-old cashier Della Pollard he wanted all the money.

The cashier said the handle of a gun protruded from his belt.

She handed over the money and the robber ran across The Bay parking lot.

He is described as being five-feet, 10 inches tall, in his early 20s, with a dark complexion, dark brown bushy hair and a heavy build. He was wearing blue jeans and a white shirt.

It was Greater Victoria's 43rd armed or attempted armed robbery since Jan. 1.

In Colwood over the weekend, three break-ins netted thieves a $2,300 high performance car engine, a stereo set and $1,000 worth of sporting goods equipment.

The engine was stolen from the showroom of Millstream Chevrolet only hours after the new dealer's official opening. The stereo was taken from the Juan de Fuca senior citizens' recreation centre. The other break-in occurred at Ray's Sports Centre on Sooke Road.

Oil Price Spiral No End in Sight

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A private study done for 25 industry and government clients forecasts that world oil prices will rise just as rapidly in the next 10 to 15 years as they have in the 3½ years since the Arab oil embargo.

By next year oil will be about $1 a barrel more than this year, the study by Kansas City's Midwest Research Institute and California's Sherman H. Clark Associates predicts, and by 1980 will be almost $3 more than this year.

The study forecasts that by 1985 the price for foreign oil will be $26.14 a barrel, and for domestic oil $24 a barrel.

World demand for oil will begin to outstrip supply by 1985, the study said, which will force an even more dramatic price rise in the five years after 1985. The study forecasts a price for foreign oil of $37.42 a barrel by 1990, and a U.S. oil price of $37.50.

If the study is correct, and world and domestic oil prices reach that level by 1990, that would mean a gasoline pump price of almost $2.50 a gallon.

The study said there are three reasons why U.S. oil will rise so rapidly in price, eventually surpassing the price of foreign oil. U.S. oil prices start from a lower base; the so-called "old" oil that is price-regulated will soon be exhausted, and domestic stocks will dwindle more quickly than stocks in foreign countries like Saudi Arabia.

The study assumes that Saudi Arabia (the country with the world's largest oil reserves) will not expand production as rapidly as some experts forecast, putting more upward pressure on prices.

"We restrain Saudi production, because we think the Saudis will restrain it," Sherman H. Clark said the other day in an interview. "We do not think the Saudis will expand their oil output just to match the world appetite. We think they will conserve their oil."

The study also assumes that the world's rush to nuclear power will slow down dramatically as more and more environmentalists question its worth. The study assumes nuclear delays in half the countries of the world now building nuclear plants, meaning more reliance on oil.

Meanwhile, a United Nations report says the world probably has enough oil and gas to last at least 100 years, but much of it will be expensive to tap.

The UN report said: "Additional petroleum and gas resources would most probably be available, albeit at a substantially higher cost, during the period of transition to the use of renewable energy sources, even if this transition period should last a hundred years or more."

The UN document is a summary of a report based on a conference held last July in Laxenburg, Austria. About 70 geologists, engineers, economists and systems analysts attended the conference, sponsored by the UN Institute for Training and Research and the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis.

$107,000 Stamp Theft

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than $107,000 worth of stamps belonging to five Americans were stolen on the weekend from a suite at a city hotel.

The stamps, part of a stamp exhibition held here last week, were stolen from Edward Allen Richardson of League City, Texas, who told police the theft occurred sometime between 7 p.m. and 10:30 p.m.

Police said today they suspect the thief has a good knowledge of stamps because only the most valuable were taken.

Ferry Directors Undecided On Reductions, Routes

Directors of the B.C. Ferries Corporation will attend Tuesday's board of directors' meeting with a wait-and-see attitude about fare reductions.

Nanaimo director Graeme Roberts, who wants an across-the-board 25 per cent cut, said today there has been enough public reaction to the high fares and he thinks "other directors will know the feelings of the people and favor the reduction."

But, he said, the issue has never come up at previous board meetings so it is hard to predict.

The cabinet will recommend to the board the corporation use part of the recently-acquired $8 million federal subsidy to bring about "appropriate rate reductions," but it is up to the directors to decide the amount and the routes on which they should apply.

The board meeting starts Tuesday at 9 a.m. in the Legislative Buildings.

Victoria director Allen Clarke said today he is "naturally in support of anything that will please the customer," but wants to look at facts and figures before making up his mind.

He said the board is charged under the B.C. Ferries Corporation Act to be fiscally responsible but that rate reductions may fit into that description.

"If we can possibly do it we will," he said.

Director John Ferguson of Vancouver said he has an open mind toward fare reductions, but that the rate structure is not his top priority.

"I'm much more concerned about the possibility of a complete disruption of the service

★ Canadian Oil Pipe Disturbs Americans

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) —

Several United States governors expressed misgivings Sunday about having their energy fate in the hands of Canada, through which Alaskan crude oil would flow to landlocked refineries.

The governors and representatives of 13 northern and midwest states met behind closed doors in Olympia all day to discuss the question of oil transportation from Alaska. The oil is to start flowing in the Trans-Alaska pipeline to Valdez in June.

The governors at the meeting were Dixy Lee Ray of Washington; Jay Hammond of Alaska; John Evans of Idaho; Thomas Judge of Montana; Arthur Link of North Dakota; Scott Matheson of Utah, and Ed Herschler of Wyoming.

Representatives attended from the states of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Oregon and South Dakota.

The refineries in those states are seeing their supplies from Canada being cut off and are looking to Washington State as a possible funnel through which Alaska oil could flow.

Ray reportedly pressed hard for a proposal under which Alaskan crude would be shipped into Washington by tanker and then shipped to the midwest through existing Canadian pipelines.

"We've been shafted by Canada so often now, why should we think they won't do the same thing again?" said Montana's Judge. His sentiments were echoed by Wyoming's Herschler.

Judge referred to Canada's elimination of oil shipments to the United States. By 1982 Canadian crude oil shipments to the United States are scheduled to halt.

Judge, Herschler and other governors indicated support for a system under which Alaskan crude would be shipped east through an American pipeline as proposed by the Northern Tier Pipeline Co. of Montana, which has applied for a permit to run a line east from the state of Washington.

"One of the advantages of the Northern Tier plan is that it will be controlled by American industry and American interests," said Idaho's Evans.

in June (because of the expiration of union contracts) than I am about the fares," Ferguson said.

"If everybody is all worried about the fares and how they disrupt the tourist business, what do they think a strike would do?"

Ferguson said it is important that directors know the truth about how the negotiations are going and the estimated amount of salary increase before the directors can decide where the federal subsidy should be used.

Director Almer Michaud of West Vancouver said he wouldn't decide on a fare change before he knows the figures involved.

"Until we know what's wanted or expected on the up-coast runs it's pretty difficult to predict what will be left," he said.

He Was Lucky

A Quick-Thinking Bus Driver And Resuscitation Saved Him

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Edgar Hobbs, 74, was on his way to a Rotary convention at The Empress when he had a heart attack.

He slumped on the back seat of the bus. His heart stopped and he stopped breathing.

But Hobbs, who lives at 2746 Dover Rd., was lucky. Bus driver Barry Phill drove right to the emergency department of Royal Jubilee Hospital just two blocks away.

Within two or three minutes of the heart attack Dr. John Maccagno and staff from the emergency department were applying cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR).

With CPR the vital body systems of breathing and blood circulation are kept going until help arrives. Without CPR, the brain is starved for oxygen-carrying blood and suffers irreparable damage after about four minutes.

CPR is a combination of mouth-to-mouth breathing and rhythmic pressure on the chest.

Maccagno is chief emergency room physician among a group of doctors who staff the emergency departments at both of Victoria's general hospitals.

He recalls that it took about an hour to get Hobbs' heart going and his condition stabilized.

Part of the problem was getting Hobbs out of the bus, he says. CPR has to be given continuously so it was a case of inching him out at the same time as help was being administered. Down the aisle of a bus that isn't easy.

Hobbs was recalling it all in his hospital room over the weekend as he ate a hearty breakfast.

"I passed out and right away the bus driver took off for the hospital. He was smart. I think he probably saved my life."

No doubt about that, says Maccagno. But he adds that Hobbs was also lucky to be struck down so close to the hospital. He is willing to discuss the case because it underlines again the vital need to get more people educated in CPR.

In just three hours of one evening people can learn this technique and can save lives by applying it until the ambulance arrives, Maccagno says.

A CPR course is taught every Tuesday evening at Camosun College, with details available by phoning the college.

Maccagno says St. John Ambulance staff also teach it and there is an on-going course for staff at both hospitals all the time. Later this month there will be a course for doctors' wives.

His aim is to get thousands of people, young and old, familiar with the technique, as has happened in Seattle where instruction is given in the school system down to grade 7.

What it all means is that some people who in the past would have died can be saved to live many years longer.

Barking Up Wrong Tree, SPCA Says of Charges

SHIELD TARGET $160,000

The Salvation Army has set a target of $160,000 for its Red Shield Appeal in May, the same objective as 1976.

"In spite of increased costs to operate the Army's many humanitarian services, we are attempting to hold the line and not increase the campaign goal," says general chairman Harry Young. "These funds are necessary to meet the anticipated operating expenses of the Salvation Army's social service institutions and I am confident Victorians will rally to ensure the target is met."

The residential canvass will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. next Monday. Volunteer canvassers are still needed.

Those willing to help should phone the campaign office at 386-6304.

A Vancouver veterinarian says there is a dramatic increase in the number of diseased dogs and cats because of the low-cost services being offered by an SPCA clinic.

But Don Adams, manager of the Victoria branch of the SPCA, says the vet is barking up the wrong tree.

Dr. James Olafson, owner of the Central Park Veterinary Hospital, the largest animal hospital in Vancouver, says the animals are not given professional treatment at the SPCA clinic, leading to the spread of dog and cat diseases.

And it is not only the animals who are affected, he adds, as many of the diseases, such as ringworm and rickettsiosis, can be transmitted to people.

Olafson said in an interview today the SPCA clinic, which serves Burnaby and Vancouver, offers low-cost spaying and vaccination services.

For example, he says, the clinic will spay an animal for $5, whereas the same service by a veterinarian would cost anywhere from $45 to $70.

He said he wouldn't mind if the SPCA would just do the spaying but by involving itself in vaccination programs and other preventive measures, it is getting into a field best left to the veterinarian.

He says the clinic does not offer full physical examinations and the animals handled by lay people who have no training in the early detection of disease.

But Adams of the SPCA here disagrees saying that there are two veterinarians at the clinic and there is no way these professionals would be party to shoddy practices.

"He's just upset because he's losing the gravy from the spaying and neutering programs," Adams said.

Adams said the veterinarians are involved in the diagnostic procedures as well as the delivery of anesthesia and performing surgery.

Adams said the SPCA does not run any such spaying clinic in Victoria. The animals that have to be altered are referred to a veterinarian, he added.

Olafson says the Vancouver-Burnaby clinic can offer low-cost services because it is subsidized by private donations and the municipalities involved.

He says the veterinarians have been working on preventive medicine for the pets and are disturbed at the effects of the SPCA's work because "we don't like treating just disease."

Olafson says the clients of the SPCA clinic are being "extremely short-changed" because their pets are not being properly cared for.

However, he does blame his colleagues for not pointing out the SPCA when it decided to set up the clinic and offer the vaccination program.

He has begun to offer free spaying operations on animals with a minimum four-month history at his hospital and he would like other veterinarians to follow suit.

If all the veterinarians did offer the free service, he said, the SPCA would soon go out of the business and then could possibly be persuaded to just stick to the spaying program and stay out of the preventive work.

Dr. Wilf Krutzmann, a veterinarian operating the Victoria Veterinary Clinic in the Mayfair Shopping Centre, says there is no problem in Victoria similar to the one raised by Olafson.

Removal Of Royalty 'Deplorable'

The removal of the Queen's portrait from the 12-cent first-class postage stamp to be released May 3 was today termed a "deplorable change" by Molly Ingram, chairman of the Victoria Branch of the Monarchist League of Canada.

A picture of the Parliament Buildings will replace the Queen's portrait. A Post Office spokesman said it is the first time the Queen has not been on the definitive stamp, although he could give no particular reason for the change.

Ingram said the Post Office could feature any pictorial theme, from flowers to Shakespeare, but still carry a small royal symbol in the top right-hand corner of the stamp.

"After all, she is the Queen of Canada," she said. "Frankly, I think this is just one more thing which is being done to lessen the importance of the Crown, which to me is a terribly important thing."

She said she hopes Victorians will inundate Ottawa with letters deploring the new stamp policy.

Brief Charges Bias by CRTC

A brief prepared by Capital Cable Co-operative for a May 3 hearing by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission accuses the CRTC of practicing "barred favoritism" and claims the federal agency is dominated "by the industry it has been established to regulate in the interest of the public."

The Victoria citizens' group, which wants to establish a community-based cablevision system in the city, will appear at the Vancouver hearing to oppose an application by Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd. to assume effective control of Premier Cablevision.

Among Premier's subsidiaries is Victoria Cablevision Ltd. A recent offer by Capital Cable Co-op to buy Victoria Cablevision for $4.54 million was turned down by Premier directors.

"In its six-page submission, Capital Cable argues that the acquisition of Premier Cablevision by Western Broadcasting would see an 'immense concentration of corporate power, the immense furtherance of the already alarming concentration of broadcasting and cable licences...'"

Western Broadcasting, controlled by the Toronto Star newspaper, owns 45 per cent of BCTV in Vancouver and also 68.5 per cent of the Vancouver Canucks hockey team.

Mentioning these and other corporate links, the group's brief says: "The great cause for concern is not only in 'licensed broadcasting' but also in the area of newspaper publishing — indeed, in the whole area of the free transmission of information."

It charges that the Western-Cable deal amounts to a "privately arranged" transfer of cable licence, but the CRTC should not grant licences except on the basis of competitive bidding from other interested parties.

Capital Cable, which has appeared unsuccessfully as an intervenor in a licence renewal application by Victoria Cablevision, says the CRTC is not fulfilling its "ordinary responsibility as a regulatory agency" if it condones the back-door acquisition of licences.

To do so while at the same time "closing the front door to legitimate applications from others is to condone partiality and the tolerance of special benefits as a commission function," the brief states.

WE'LL REGAIN OUR COOL...

Sunbathers' weather on the weekend challenged temperature records, but cloudier skies are forecast for the next few days.

A cool front from the Pacific may bring showers tonight along with winds in Juan de Fuca Strait, the airport weather office said.

Today's high was not expected to exceed 17 degrees, compared with 19 Sunday which tied a 1941 high for April 24. The airport also registered 19 Saturday, exceeding the 17.2 degrees for that date set in 1951.

Shot at Truck Nets Probation

A young Victoria man who shot at a truck in which his wife and another man were riding was put on two years probation today in county court.

Jack Douglas Haywood, 20, was ordered by Judge M. L. T. Drake to turn over his firearms to police during his probation.

Haywood pleaded guilty to using a firearm last Nov. 18 in a manner dangerous to the safety of other persons during a marital dispute. A second charge of discharging a firearm with intent to endanger the life of James John Warwick was stayed.

Defence counsel told the court that Haywood's wife had spent a night with Warwick and that they were on their way back to the Haywood residence when the shots were fired.

Counsel said Haywood had taken an extra dose of valium to calm himself but this had the opposite effect.

Talks to Start

Negotiations for a new agreement between the provincial government and the 33,000-member B.C. Government Employees Union will begin in Victoria May 12.

Union general secretary John Fryer says the first two days of talks will be devoted to working out a timetable for negotiations of the master agreement and the 12 component agreements.

The negotiations with the Government Employee Relations Bureau will begin less than two months after the formal signing of the last collective agreement between the BCGEU and the government. The 22-month master agreement, which expires July 31, 1977, was ratified in January after 13 months of negotiations.

KEY POSTS ARE FILLED

Two key municipal positions have been filled in Saanich. Alan Hopper of the city of Victoria's planning department will become assistant municipal planner June 1.

Arthur Wilks, formerly of Calgary, becomes personnel director on Friday.

Hopper will receive a salary of $25,500 while Wilks will have a salary of $24,000.

Answer Soon on Student Jobs

A union spokesman said today the uncertainty surrounding 70 summer jobs for students in Saanich should be cleared up by the end of the week.

Paul McKivett, secretary of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 374, said the question of the wage rates for the students will be placed before a union membership meeting this week.

He said the union won't comment further until after that meeting.

A controversy has flared over how much the students should be paid with the union insisting the summer workers be paid union rates.

Thirty of the 70 jobs would be provided under the provincial student summer employment program and pay $22.50 a day, while the other 40 jobs would result from Saanich council's decision to spend $100,000 of the municipal contingency fund for summer jobs.

Those landing one of the 40 jobs would be paid about $4 an hour.

The union agreed to take the matter to its members following a meeting Friday between union representatives and a Saanich municipal management team.

Ald. Joe Bourque, who proposed the job-creation program to Saanich council, said today he didn't know the details of what happened at Friday's meeting but heard the union had agreed to put the municipality's offer to the members.

"I doubt that the general membership feels the same way as the (union) executive," Bourque said.

The alderman said regardless of what the union members say, the ones to decide whether the jobs should be offered at the lower pay should be the students.

He said the union's suggestion that the students be paid $6.94 an hour is "patently ridiculous" but the students should decide whether they would be willing to work for less.
